Boogie Boy Caught

A boogie-loving 12-year-old Duncan boy has landed in hot water for the second time in as many weeks.

Colwood RCMP picked up the boy at 1:30 a.m. today in a car parked on Goldstream just off the Trans Canada Highway.

Police said the car, a 1962 Lincoln, was stolen from Pro Tire Service in Duncan earlier in the evening along with a small amount of cash.

The boy, who was alone, had $12 in cash.

The same youngster and a 14-year-old boy were stopped two weeks ago on the Malahat in a car stolen in the Duncan area.

This time, as then, the boy told police he was heading for a teen disco in Victoria.

"Apparently he likes to boogie," an officer said.

Severed Tanker In Tow

HALIFAX (CP) — Weather conditions were deteriorating today in an area off the Nova Scotia coast where two sections of the British tanker Kurdistan were being towed out to sea.

Reg Towers, spokesman for the transport ministry, said northwest winds of 30 knots were reported in the area today about 37 miles off the Cape Breton coast where the bow and stern sections are being towed by ocean-going tugs.

The forecast calls for deteriorating weather conditions today.

The Coast Guard has decided to sink the bow section off the continental shelf and a decision on what will be done with the oil laden stern will be made later today.

Meanwhile, an aircraft equipped with scanning equipment was to fly over area today to determine where the estimated 3,000 tons of oil lost from the tanker has gone. The only evidence of a spill Friday was a sheen of oil spotted off the Cape Breton coast.

Environment Minister Len Marchand arrived here Friday and was to fly over the area today.

Clark Wins $65,000

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Supreme Court ruled Friday that the provincial government must pay $65,000 to former rentalsman Barrie Clark.

Clark, now a radio open-line host, had sued the government for breach of contract.

He was hired as rentalsman by former attorney-general Alex Macdonald in April, 1974, but resigned April 1, 1978, and began the suit.

Clark said Friday he brought the suit because the government did not give him and several senior staff he hired salary raises that had been guaranteed by his contract.

He said he hopes that if the senior staff he hired do not now get the raises, they will sue the government.

Fisheries Officers Halt Cutting of Trees

Charlottes Logging Showdown

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

Federal fisheries officers in the Queen Charlotte Islands Friday forced loggers to halt falling trees in a controversial restricted area.

The loggers moved out only after the officers threatened to lay charges.

Fisheries official Dave Schutz said that Q.C. Timber Ltd. stopped its operation after the challenge.

"If they go back in there we will definitely lay charges," said Schutz.

News of the incident came only hours after an anonymous caller tipped the Times that Q.C. Timber was planning to cut in the area to force a showdown.

The protected timber is on a 40-acre site put off limits to logging early this year because the steep slope threatens to slide into an adjacent salmon stream, Riley Creek.

Shortly after the federal fisheries department ordered the area left alone, the provincial forests department informed Q.C. Timber that cutting would be allowed.

The confrontation has simmered for over a week, with fisheries threatening to back its stand with court action that could include fines of up to $50,000 or jail terms of up to two years.

The charges would be laid under Bill C38, the Fisheries Act, which makes it unlawful to damage fish habitat.

Schutz said the Friday incident didn't result in the laying of any charges because the fallers had only just started into the restricted timber when fisheries officers arrived.

"They'd crossed over the imaginary line between what we'd said was okay and what was prohibited, but they hadn't taken very many trees."

Schutz said the loggers were aware the timber was off limits and were apparently trying to see if federal fisheries intended to enforce its cutting ban.

"We're going to be keeping a close watch from now on," said Schutz.

A spokesman for Q.C. Timber said from his office in Vancouver that the only members of the company who were authorized to discuss the incident were unavailable until Monday.

It is the first area ever put off limits in the Charlottes because of the steepness of the terrain.

The outcome of the battle will set important precedents which could see logging halted elsewhere in the Islands, particularly in the Moresby Wilderness region which is noted for its rugged and steep terrain.

Sterilization To Halt Pain Of Heredity?

LONDON (AP) — A British couple want to have their three children sterilized because the mother suffers from a hereditary disease that they fear will be passed on to future generations. The decision has touched off a medical and ethical controversy.

Pamela Gooch, 33, has Huntington's chorea, a chronic disorder of the nervous system that causes jerking muscle spasms, slurred speech and premature aging. There is no known treatment and Mrs. Gooch said she has about five years to live.

"I know what a dramatic step this is, but because of their genes, my children have a 50-50 chance of contracting it," Mrs. Gooch told reporters Friday at the family's home in the Staffordshire coal-mining town of Cannock.

"I saw my father die in pain, and my children are seeing me going towards my death in the same way. Only by ending our line can we prevent them from watching their own children suffer."

Mrs. Gooch and her husband said they plan to have Diane, 14, Tina, 11, and Scott, 9, sterilized when they reach the age of 16.

The eldest daughter said: "I would like to have children. But seeing the way mum suffers, I would hate to have kids and pass it on. I understand what mum and dad are doing and I'll go along with it."

The father, Anthony, 40, who works an overnight shift in a coal mine so he can care for his housebound wife and the children during the day, said:

"I know people might criticize us and say we have no right to make such a decision, but I disagree."

But Dr. Brian Stott, the family's physcian, said he is not happy about the parents' intentions. He said he does not believe any surgeon would be happy about performing the sterilization operations unless it could be proved which of the children were going to develop the disease.

The secretary of the Association to Combat Huntington's Chorea, Maureen Jones, said: "Each child has a 50-50 chance of catching the disease. Mrs. Gooch must realize she could be sterilizing one or two of her children for no reason at all. In 20 years there may be a controlling drug even if her children do have the disease."

A spokesman for the British Medical Association said: "We hope no doctor would be prepared to carry out a sterilization. The thing to do is for the healthy parent and the doctor to ensure that the children obtain proper counselling when they grow up."

Rhodes Verdict: Murder

A B.C. Supreme Court jury found Sidney Blair Rhodes, 22, guilty of first-degree murder Friday in the stabbing slaying Oct. 12 of 17-year-old Susan Marie Calve.

The jury deliberated two hours after hearing nine days of evidence from the prosecution and defence.

Mr. Justice D.E. Andrews told Rhodes under the Criminal Code he must serve a minimum of 25 years in prison before being eligible for parole.

Defence counsel Patrick Sweeney said later there will be an appeal.

Calve was found dead in a wood beside Cedar Hill golf course Oct. 14 from 40 stab and slash-type wounds, mostly to the throat.

The jury returned to the court once to ask Andrews for a legal interpretation of first and second degree murder and manslaughter.

Sadat-Arab Rift Grows

Times News Services

Jordan's King Hussein today pledged to oppose the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty and join Palestinian guerrillas in punishing Egypt for its break with the rest of the Arab world, diplomatic sources said.

And Arab militants threatened terrorism and all-out war as a U.S. delegation arrived in Saudi Arabia today to try to win approval for the treaty.

Hussein, up to now considered a moderate, indicated his determination to resist U.S. pressure by inviting Yasser Arafat, leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization, to talks at the northern city of Mafraq and conferring with him a day before the U.S. delegation was to arrive in Jordan.

The U.S. team led by Carter's National Security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, landed today at the Riyadh airport and met with King Khaled and Crown Prince Fahd.

But they were given little chance of convincing the Saudis to join Egypt in mending three decades of war with Israel by approving the peace pact.

The American team planned to meet with King Hussein in Amman Sunday.

Arafat then met with Hussein for four hours at Mafraq, 30 miles north of Amman near the Syrian border.

Jordanian diplomatic sources said the two reaffirmed their support for the Baghdad Arab summit resolutions of last November, which pledged political and economic sanctions against Egypt if it signed a peace treaty with Israel.

Hussein also pledged his support for the PLO as the sole legitimate representative of the Palestinians and both sides voiced their intention to strengthen co-operation between Jordan and the PLO in order to maximize support for the Palestinians in Iraeli-occupied territories, the sources said.

Meanwhile, the Kuwait newspaper Al Siyassah said Palestinian guerrillas want to reactivate a Black September strike force against U.S. targets and Arab moderates supporting the treaty. Black September claimed responsibility for the 1972 Munich Olympics massacre of Israeli athletes.

Four Get Jail For Ignoring Suspensions

Provincial court Judge Blake Allan jailed four motorists Friday for driving while their licences were suspended.

The sentences were handed out the same day a report prepared for the attorney-general's ministry recommended jail terms for the offence.

Judge Allan, commenting that Attorney-General Garde Gardom thinks the same way he does, said he had read about Gardom's approval of a provincial Motor Vehicle Task Force study which recommended mandatory jail terms for suspended motorists caught on the road.

They pleaded guilty to driving while under suspension.

Allan also imposed a 21-day jail sentence on King Tong Lui, also known as Tony King Tong Lui, of 2533 Cook.

Lui was fined $50 for the same offence in January of this year.

Women's Lib Gets Word: Go Home

TEHRAN (Reuter) — An Iranian woman columnist lambasted Kate Millett and other American feminists today, saying "women's lib, Western-style, is irrelevant, inapplicable, unacceptable and distasteful in our country."

Writing in the English-language newspaper Tehran Journal, columnist Minou Moshiri attacked Ms. Millett and her colleagues, declaring:

"Your so-called liberation has only given you the freedom to be dreadfully alone, to be alcoholic, to be drug addicts, to be promiscuous, to be over-aggressive and finally to be most terribly frustrated and unhappy."

The Iranian government has said it would deport Ms. Millett, 45, following her participation in a number of demonstrations staged here to protest what feminists saw as Islamic encroachments on Iranian women's rights, including attempts to impose the traditional chador (veil and cloak).

"Your bra-burning, your man-hating and your confrontations have led you nowhere in particular, have they?" the columnist wrote. "Your movement, Ms. Millett, is doing more harm than good, it is reaching for the absurd and it is quite frankly becoming increasingly difficult to take it at all seriously without a genuine feeling of embarrassment."

Commenting on a report that U.S. feminist Karen de Crow has formed an international committee to support Iranian women, the columnist said:

"If, heaven forbid, Ms. de Crow is successful in carrying out her threat of uninvited 'help' and unasked-for 'moral support,' she will succeed only in ruining any chance we may have of putting things right our own way.

"With friends like Ms. de Crow, who needs enemies?

"Our women are perfectly capable of taking care of themselves and their problems, thank you. In a matter of a few days, they successfully settled the issue, a rather absurd one I admit, of whether or not to wear a veil.

"So no S.O.S. to the world to come to our rescue please, Ms. de Crow. No moral support, no economic support and above all no delegation of hysterical females to enlighten us, if you please.

"Why do you not continue to emasculate your men, drive your husbands and children nuts and let us fight for our dignity? Yours is a different experience with little relevance and even less application to our own."

Mortgage Rate Cut

The Toronto Dominion Bank and Royal Trust Co. cut some of their mortgage rates Friday, following the lead of other financial institutions.

The moves are seen as a signal that mortgage rates are starting to tumble, principally because of a glut of mortgage money on the market.

The latest reductions were started by Royal Bank of Canada, followed later by the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

All three banks lowered their rates by a quarter point, charging 11 per cent on conventional closed five-year mortgages and 10.75 per cent on National Housing Act (NHA) insured, five-year loans.

Canada Trust has lowered its four and five-year NHA mortgage rates to 10.75 per cent from 11 per cent. Its three-year NHA rate remains unchanged at 10.75 per cent.

The one-, two-, three- and five-year conventional mortgage rates are unchanged at 11 per cent.

Hijack Foiled

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A stewardess who kept her cool and FBI agents who crept into a hijacked Continental Airlines jet through a cockpit window combined to capture a man accused of demanding $200,000 and a trip to Cuba.

John Carleton Kivlen, 52, of San Rafael, Calif., was being held today in the Pima County Jail in lieu of $1 million bail. He has been charged with seizing or exercising control of an aircraft by force or violence.

The man held a stewardess, Mary Ellen Paul, 31, of El Paso, Tex., hostage for about two hours after everyone else on the plane had left, authorities said.

During the time she was being held, two FBI agents, Don Sickles and Bill Christianson, sneaked aboard the plane, said FBI spokesman Leon Gaskill.

They're Fit to be Tied

TOKYO (Reuter) — A plan by the Japanese government to promote a no-jacket no-necktie campaign this summer to help conserve energy has caused an uproar in the necktie industry, a cabinet minister said today.

Masumi Esaki, minister of international trade and industry, said his government has received a protest telegram from the industry, saying such a campaign would damage necktie makers.

The no-jacket no-necktie campaign was conceived by the government to allow people to work comfortably under reduced summer air conditioning.

Worse Quakes To Come?

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — U.S. government earthquake experts warned Friday that a series of quakes which shook Southern California on Thursday could be a signal of worse ones to come.

Their concern, they said, stems from the location of the latest shocks — atop a 400-kilometre-long swelling of the earth known as the Southern California Uplift that was discovered only three years ago.

Robert Wesson, chief of the Office of Earthquake Studies of the U.S. Geological Survey, emphasized in an interview that he and most other scientists still consider the forecasting of quakes mostly an exercise in guesswork.

Still, he said, the tremors Thursday are worrisome.

Spies Use Pillowtalk

BONN (AP) — Lonely women secretaries in sensitive government jobs are being wooed in cafes by Communist Casanovas and seduced into betraying state secrets.

Officials in Bonn and at NATO headquarters in Brussels have uncovered five recent cases of German secretary-spies who yielded to East German spymaster-lovers.

Counter-intelligence agents still are assessing the extent of the damage done to West Germany and the Western alliance by the information the secretaries handed over to the Soviet bloc.

Authorities fear more of these sex-for-secrets headline cases. They have launched a poster campaign in government offices warning secretaries against treasonous pillow-talk and heart-string techniques of communist spies.

"There is a code word that opens safes: Love," says a poster that shows a couple embracing. "Some love affairs are planned in East Berlin," it cautions, "and the partner is already married to the state security agency there. Please think about it."

But many women do not.

The latest case involved Christa Broszey, 32, confidential secretary to powerful conservative politician Kurt Biedenkopf. It was the third case in a week involving secretaries to top politicians.

Saying she was going to the hairdresser, Miss Broszey defected to East Germany last Friday, apparently with her spymaster-lover. When she did not appear at work Monday, an espionage investigation began. A search of her apartment revealed a telecopier for transmitting documents and clues which led to the apartment of her apparent lover, Konrad Kipping, 41, who posed as an agricultural equipment salesman. A telecopier also was found at his apartment.

"Spies chosen for good looks and charm cruise cafes in the Bonn and Cologne area during weekends to meet women who are sitting alone over cake and coffee," said Heribert Hellenbroich, of the federal office for the protection of the constiution and the man responsible for the poster campaign.

Single women over 30, attracted by high-paying secretarial jobs in Bonn but bored by the lack of available men, are prime targets.

"The agents try to find out as quickly as possible if the women are secretaries for an important man," Hellenbroich said. "If this is the case, the agent 'falls in love' with the secretary."

Lottery Winner Gets Seconds

Jacques Beausoleil admits he felt a bit shaky after picking up $100,000 in lottery prize money — his second major lottery prize in two weeks. Beausoleil, a 45-year-old housepainter from Pointe Gatineau, Que., arrived at the Wintario office in Toronto Friday to claim one of the top prizes. The stunned father of five said "it might take me a little while to realize I really won $100,000. Two weeks ago I won $5,000 in the Mini-Loto draw, and it feels great." Beausoleil, whose children range in age from 13 to 21, said he buys tickets for every lottery draw because "if you want to be lucky these days, you've got to buy tickets."

Closer to home, a winner in the latest Western Canada Lottery is Catherine Cartwright of Crofton. She won $100,000 in the latest draw.

No one is perfect, not even Albert Einstein. Hubbard Phelps made that discovery when Einstein spent the summer of 1934 at picturesque Watch Hill, R.I., and gained a reputation as an absent-minded sailor. "He would go out in the morning and sail due west until he ran aground at Napatree Point," Phelps said Friday. "The next day, he did the same thing. It went on all summer."

Two men walked naked into a supermarket in Cape Town, and while police would like to charge them with indecency, there is one problem — the witnesses looked at everything but the men's faces. "Even if we caught some suspects, I don't know how we would conduct an identification parade," a police spokesman lamented. Saleswoman Isobel Opperman told police: "They were well-built and had all-over tans, but I didn't look at their faces."

Leonide Massine, one of the great names of 20th century ballet, has died at the age of 82. The Russian-born Massine, who died in a West German hospital Thursday, was choreographer and principal dancer with Diaghilev's Ballet Russe 60 years ago.

Another loss to the arts is the death of Giacomo Lauri Volpi, an Italian tenor who won acclaim from opera lovers throughout the world.

And finally another singer, Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm, the musical star of the B.C. cabinet, has composed another song, but not of the same calibre as the last. The new song, which Vander Zalm sang at a Social Credit party dinner in Courtenay, asks people to join the Social Credit team and attacks the New Democratic Party. But chances are it won't be as memorable with the voters as his last one, which referred to French-Canadians as frogs.

HOW TO SAVE OIL

Right now we can't afford to waste a drop of petroleum – especially since Canada and the other 18 members of the International Energy Agency have just agreed to reduce the world demand for oil. We have been able to help the international situation by producing more western Canadian oil but we must also minimize our demand on those valuable oil supplies.

All of us – householders, motorists, and businesses large and small – can follow the steps below to eliminate waste.

Remember when we save precious energy for Canada, we also save money for ourselves. Do it!

The experts say that Canadians are on an energy binge; we waste about half of all the energy we use. Simply by cutting out the waste we can stretch our resources and protect our way of life.

Here are some suggestions.

5 WAYS TO SAVE ON HOME HEATING OIL

Lower the thermostat.

Each Celsius degree over 20°C (68°F) adds about 5% to your heating bill. Dropping the setting from 22°C (72°F) to 20°C (68°F) can save you 10%. That's $60 on a winter heating bill of $600.

Lower the temperature even further at night, and when you're going to be away for a few days.

Have a thorough furnace check-up.

Tuning up your oil furnace can cut consumption by as much as 25%. It should take your serviceman about two hours to do a good job.

Read The Billpayer's Guide to Furnace Servicing to find out what you can do to improve your furnace's performance, and what your serviceman should do. See the coupon below.

Inspect your furnace filter.

A dusty, clogged filter forces the heating system to work harder and wastes energy. Check the filter once a month.

Invest in insulation.

Most Canadian homes are poorly insulated. Ceilings should have at least 6" of insulation; wall cavities should be completely filled; basement walls should be protected to two feet below ground level.

Insulation is an excellent investment, with returns as high as 50% year after year. Many insulation projects such as weather-stripping and caulking can be done quickly and inexpensively. The free book, Keeping the Heat In, explains it all.

For a free insulation analysis on your home, send for the Ener$ave for Home Insulation Questionnaire (use coupon below). Based on your answers, we provide a computerized analysis of where to insulate, the costs and the savings.

Call our Ener$ave Heatline, toll free, for answers to your particular insulation questions and information on financial assistance programs. Call Monday through Friday during normal business hours, toll free, 1-800-267-9563 (B.C. residents 112-800-267-9563).

If your home was built before 1946 you are probably eligible for a federal insulation grant of up to $350. Call the Canadian Home Insulation Program collect at (514) 341-1511 for more information and the location of your provincial CHIP office.

Let the sunshine in.

Energy from the sun is free, so it makes sense to use it as much as we can. In the winter, open curtains and drapes during the bright part of the day and close them at night for their insulating value. In summer, do the opposite.

7 WAYS TO SAVE GASOLINE

Have a tune-up.

A lot of little troubles can steal your gas and money. Pick your mechanic carefully and expect at least a 10% improvement in mileage.

Slow down on the highway.

At 110 km/h you use about 20% more gasoline than at 90 km/h. Slow down to 90 km/h. It saves energy, saves money and – because it's safer – it just might save your life.

Try radial tires.

They'll cut your gas consumption by as much as 10% on the highway.

Watch your driving habits.

Avoid jackrabbit starts and sudden braking. Combine several short trips into one longer trip. Try to avoid rush-hour traffic.

Better still, leave your car at home.

Switch to public transit. Or a car pool. Or a bicycle. Or your own two feet. Walking instead of driving to the corner store is a worthwhile step.

If you're thinking about a new car, think small.

Car weight is the single biggest factor affecting mileage. Remember that each additional 1000 pounds of car weight will require an extra 150 to 170 gallons of gasoline a year. Expensive driving!

Send for your free copy of "The car mileage book".

HOW TO BUY, DRIVE AND MAINTAIN YOUR CAR TO SAVE MONEY AND ENERGY

4 WAYS FOR LARGE AND SMALL OFFICES, FACTORIES, STORES TO SAVE ENERGY

Put good housekeeping practices to work.

Here's how you can cut your energy bill by as much as 20%:

- Reduce heating and lighting during non-working hours.
- Check your heating and cooling equipment every six months for efficient performance.
- Seal up any heat leaks around windows and doors, insulate steam pipes.
- Lower all thermostats and check them regularly to be sure they're accurate.
- Seal off areas that don't require heating and cooling.
- Turn off unnecessary lights.
- Schedule cleaning and maintenance to follow immediately after work hours, to cut lighting and heating costs.

Use energy-saving products.

Encourage car pools.

Your plant or office can do a lot to help people organize themselves into neighbourhood car pools.

Use cars and trucks efficiently.

Be sure all vehicles have regular tune-ups. Urge drivers to turn off engines when they're stopped for pick-up or delivery. Plan delivery routes and schedules to cut down duplication and avoid rush-hour traffic.

When it's time to replace vehicles, switch to smaller, more energy-efficient models.

ELECTRICITY

In the Atlantic provinces oil plays an important role in generating electricity, so saving electricity can help save oil. In the conversion of oil into electricity only one-third of the available energy is retained; the rest, or two-thirds, escapes as heat or smoke up the chimney.

So in Atlantic Canada oil can be saved by turning out lights, using only those appliances that are essential, turning your electric water heater down to 50°C (120°F), being careful with hot water, and the dozens of other small ways to conserve electricity. In business too it's of additional importance to save electricity used for heating, lighting, cooling and machinery.

Conservation means cutting out the waste. With just a little effort we can stretch our petroleum supplies, save money and protect our way of life.

Do we really have a choice? Saving energy is vitally important, and not at all difficult. These books will give you plenty of help.

Regulating 'shopping sprees'

The old saying is more often directed at unwary customers, but "let the buyer beware" these days is being directed at a number of Victoria businesses dissatisfied with the results of a promotion engineered by a Vancouver firm.

Some 42 local merchants were sold a "shopping spree" scheme involving books of coupons redeemable for free goods and services which the promoter said would encourage new business. Indeed it did; it brought in so much trade — most of it non-paying — for some of the firms that it is believed to have forced them out of business. For some merchants, it's been "a total disaster," according to Better Business Bureau manager Bill Tindall. Others have had to limit the redemption of the coupons to a manageable handful a day, lest they end up giving away the shop.

On the other hand, some businesses say the promotion by Shopping Spree Merchandise Adv. Inc. brought them nothing but good and was a valuable exercise in making themselves known in the Victoria area.

It seems some of the participants underestimated the effect on their businesses of so many freebies — some 3,000 books of coupons were sold — or the promoter was a little over-enthusiastic in selling the scheme. At any rate, a number of local merchants are still reeling from the headaches it caused, and they will not agree to such deals again without doing a little arithmetic.

Still, there are valid complaints about the scheme against the promoter. One is using the names of respected Victoria service clubs to sell the books of coupons. Their names appeared prominently on the cover, suggesting a charitable enterprise. Many people probably bought the things on the strength of this "endorsement" alone, thinking that all or most of the $24.95 price was going to a good cause.

The truth is that it was a straight business venture, with the promoter giving the clubs just $1.50 a book, $4,500 in all while he earned $75,000 from the sale of the coupon books. In effect it was a licence fee for borrowing their names. There's nothing illegal in this, but full disclosure of the allocation of monies should be printed on the items sold.

A second basic requirement should be numbering the coupon books. The Victoria merchants who participated in last fall's "shopping spree" were told that only 3,000 would be printed, but there's no way of knowing how many have been sold. Even the promotion company itself can't or won't say what the figure is.

Such schemes are sold on the grounds they will help new businesses attract customers, and there is a place for them. But they ought to be subject to a few regulations to ensure the public and participating businesses get what they thought they paid for.

Hurry up, Garde

The Saanich police board has a good point when it asks Attorney-General Garde Gardom to say soon what is to be the fate of a police commission report recommending some integration of police services in Greater Victoria.

The report was made public months ago, but so far there has been no response from Gardom. Meanwhile, the various police boards are trying to draw up their 1979 budgets without knowing whether they will be asked to share the costs of some facilities.

Saanich board chairman Mayor Mel Couvelier is interested in two proposals he thinks would be particularly suitable for centralized service. One is a better central record-keeping service which he believes would benefit all Victoria area police forces. It's his suggestion that the Victoria force take responsibility for this but then have it used — and paid for — by all municipalities.

His other proposal is for a dog unit which certainly could serve the entire southern Island. Saanich itself would be willing to establish and maintain this unit on the same basis.

But until a decision is made on possible centralization, neither of these proposals can go ahead successfully. The expense is too great for any individual police force to set up such specialized services.

The centralization of these and other services could scarcely help but provide higher quality police protection for all residents of Greater Victoria. Even though it might be politically unpopular in a few quarters, Gardom ought to announce immediately how the centralization will take place.

CLAUDE ADAMS

Schlesinger on firing line

WASHINGTON — Once again, James Schlesinger, the American energy czar with the rumpled suits and the Harvard-bred arrogance, is being portrayed as the villain in the country's oil and gas crisis.

The long knives are out in congress for the odd 50-year-old superbureaucrat (his hobby is birdwatching) whose prime function in recent months has been to alert Americans, in blunt terms, that there's a crisis around the corner.

In many ways, the hostility directed at Schlesinger is a measure of the country's sense of frustration over energy, and the political paralysis that has stalemated President Carter's "moral equivalent of war" in the past two years.

This week, five Democratic senators took turns roasting the energy secretary and demanding he resign. The rap was that he is to blame for the "continued drift [and] continued lethargy" in U.S. energy policy.

Impossible job

They called him an incompetent, a vacillator, and something just short of a liar. Nor were they impressed with his admission that he had offered President Carter his resignation three times, to no avail.

Managing energy policy in the U.S. in these times is like trying to hold down the deck chairs in a hurricane. Some recent events, apart from the cutoff of Iranian oil, underscore this fact:

- The federal government this week closed down five nuclear reactors for safety reasons. This will boost oil demand by at least 100,000 barrels a day.
- New data show that oil imports were up 18 per cent in February, and American motorists have blissfully ignored calls to cut down on gas consumption, pushing up demand nearly five per cent.
- Automakers said that government efforts to increase auto efficiency to 28 miles a gallon by 1985 will cost $80 billion, three times the cost of putting a man on the moon. In other words, a giant step for inflation.
- New production in the U.S. is sagging, while over-all consumption continues to grow.
- Recently, the federal government was shown to be the single most voracious guzzler of gasoline in the country — 236 million gallons a year, not counting the military.

Meanwhile, the U.S. administration is preoccupied with mideast summitry, leaving Schlesinger and his staff alone to face a congress growing ever more restive.

What is surprising about all the sniping at Schlesinger is that the secretary is essentially a tough guy, a hard-liner who believes that higher fuel prices, combined with mandatory conservation, can pull the U.S. out of its energy squeeze.

One of his staunchest defenders on the Hill, Sen. Henry Jackson, argues that it is hypocritical of his colleagues to "seek a scapegoat" for the country's energy mess. The blame must be spread around, he says.

If nothing else, Schlesinger is a survivor, and the smart money says he will survive this latest stoning. Serving under three different presidents, the former professor has weathered some of the most rugged Washington jobs, including director of the CIA, defense secretary and chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission.

JAMES SCHLESINGER
riding out another storm

As head of the department of energy, which had to pull together the work of 50 different agencies, Schlesinger's job is to be visible and squarely in the firing line. Yet he is a woeful lobbyist, awkward at backslapping and glad-handing and short on humor.

He led Jimmy Carter's fight on Capitol Hill to pass a national energy bill and the bitter 18-month battle almost ground him into the dust. Because of some well-publicized and questionable deals for Senate support, he damaged his long-held reputation as a political manager.

The sensitive congressmen studied his facts and figures, but they were turned off by his aloofness and intellectual superiority.

Still, he holds the president's confidence. Carter admires his analytical skill, his loyalty and his candor. And like Andrew Young in the United Nations, Schlesinger speaks for the hard side of the president.

The energy secretary uses words like weapons. Earlier this year, he told congress that the disruption of oil flowing from Iran could trigger a "severe economic trauma" the likes of which the U.S. had not seen since the Great Depression. He foresaw higher gas and fuel oil prices, and lines at the gas pumps. His message alarmed legislators and the public, and the U.S. dollar dipped sharply on money markets. Schlesinger was unfairly painted as a Cassandra.

Resisted crisis

Since the 1973 Arab embargo, which turned into a bonanza for the oil companies, the American public has resisted crisis talk about energy. As one constituent told Sen. Paul Tsongas of Massachusetts: "God would not have put us on this earth if he wanted us to run out of energy."

On Capitol Hill, Schlesinger's critics accuse him of being out to fatten the producers. Ralph Nader has labelled him anti-consumer, and congressional aides complain about his imperiousness.

[illegible] the energy department would be a painful job even for a temperate man. Schlesinger is not one to temper his views. In a recent television interview, he alarmed the White House by saying that the U.S. must be prepared to use military force to safeguard mideast oil fields.

In Mexico, he is a hated gringo for his high-handed veto of a 1978 deal to pipe Mexican natural gas into the U.S. because it was too expensive.

But these gaffes aside, dumping Schlesinger would do little to ease the American energy miseries. The campaign against him smacks of desperation. In this case, killing the messenger would remove some aggravation, but the message would remain. The energy crunch is a lot bigger than one man.

EDITOR'S NOTEBOOK

Notes from Arizona on development, racism

A collection of notes gathered during a couple of weeks in Arizona:

The convention centre in Phoenix has been frequently mentioned by promoters of a similar centre in Victoria as one of the shining success stories of the convention business. Phoenix officials told Victoria consultants in glowing terms of the wonderful effect the centre has had on the rundown area of their old downtown.

The effect was certainly invisible in a quick trip I made to the area. To be sure, the centre itself is an esthetically pleasing building, well-designed and situated in the midst of a huge civic plaza. Next door are two complementary buildings housing an art gallery and a symphony hall; within a couple of blocks lies a gigantic new city hall and an even larger new court building. It is apparent that millions of taxpayers' dollars have been poured into the area.

Yet for all that, the area remains essentially a commercial slum, worse by far than any commercial slum that now exists in Victoria. Across the street from the centre is a collection of cheap porno houses reminiscent of the worst of Toronto's Yonge Street, faded second hand furniture stores with their merchandise heaped in the doorways and vacant lots covered with rusty tin cans and passed-out drunks.

The centre has spawned a couple of fancy hotels and a few gift shops — some tourist traps, some of better quality — but it appears little real change has been made in the character of the area.

Equally curiously, when I visited — a warm, sunny day at the noon hour — the plaza itself was virtually deserted. A large number of workers ate lunch in a square near the courthouse a couple of blocks away, but there was nothing to attract them to the plaza itself.

A convention centre for Victoria may well be a risk worth taking, but the one in Phoenix should certainly not be held up as an example of what we want here.

Phoenix should also serve as an example to Victoria — and any other city — of the hazards of allowing highway strip development. On almost every main road leading out of the city, commercial developments sprawl along the highway for miles after the houses and sideroads have halted. Most of the developments are cheap looking and ill-designed — roadhouses, used car lots, tourist traps selling plastic cacti and roadrunners, and the ubiquitous golden arches of McDonald's.

The highway strips can do nothing but discourage the tourists who are a mainstay of the Phoenix economy. Much of the city and its environs is actually well-planned and attractive, but one wonders how many potential tourists don't stay around to find that out. It's something we should remember as we consider potential developments for the Pat Bay and Island highways.

One hears little these days of racism in the U.S. The heyday of the civil rights movement is over since laws have been passed prohibiting outright discrimination. Yet talking to Americans makes it clear that many whites, especially older people and especially southerners, still hold attitudes of blind, unreasoning prejudice towards blacks.

Blatant, sour-tasting racist remarks are exchanged in public — calling the blacks "niggers," accusing them of drunkenness, laziness, and irresponsibility, and commenting that they shouldn't be hired if a white person is available for the job.

More optimistically, however, many other Americans are now acutely embarrassed by this type of prejudice and take pains to explain to visiting Canadians that it is, they hope, a dying attitude.

Highway engineers in B.C. would doubtless like to be able to adopt Arizona's solution to the problem of washed out bridges. In heavy rains and floods this past winter, hundreds of bridges were washed away. Total replacement cost is estimated at $53 million.

But instead of rushing desperately from site to site installing Bailey bridges as replacements, the Arizona engineers need only wait two or three days until the floods are over and most of the river beds are dry again. Then, knowing that it is unlikely water will flow through the beds until next November or December, they simply plow out a rough road down the banks to allow drivers to take their cars right across the river bottoms.

Then they have until next fall to get new bridges in place. — B.McL.

Not getting rich

Some observers have questioned the propriety of financial institutions being paid $5 for each application taken for free shares in the B.C. Resources Investment Corporation. Speaking for most of the trust companies in the province, let me attempt to paint an accurate picture for your readers.

First, to demonstrate the true community spirit of our member companies we were asked for our commitment to participate in the mammoth task at hand without knowing how much our compensation would be. I have attended two briefing meetings in Vancouver and other members of our industry have attended other meetings to a total of four or five.

All of these meetings cost money to attend. We have received andabsorbed the contents of the share distribution manual issued by BCRIC. It has been changed at least twice since the initial meeting which, of course, has required staff instruction at all of our offices — again at considerable energy and cost. The organizers of the share distribution have asked that we complete each application on behalf of the applicant as opposed to having the client complete the form on his own.

In addition there is the accounting element, the involved daily "batching" and subsequent transmittal to BCRIC followed by the requisitioning of share certificates by each branch after June 15 for arrival at the branch before B.C. Day, Aug. 6. Between this latter date and Sept. 22 all offices will be matching the share certificates to their copies of the application which in turn must be matched against the client's copy — if he or she hasn't lost it!

Any share certificates not claimed by Sept. 22 will be balanced against the remaining applications and returned to BCRIC or the government. As you can see, we will have a five-month involvement in the share distribution and while I hope we all emerge with a slight profit, I have very serious doubts!

We know there will be countless individuals who will have many and varied questions on the share distribution and we in the trust industry are endeavoring to have as many of our senior staff as is possible available to guide the public.

Our industry motto is "There's Someone at a Trust Company Who Can Help You" and I respectfully suggest the service our member companies will be providing the public over a period of five months is well worth the $5. — A. Southwell, Chairman of the Trust Companies Association of Canada, B.C. Section.

Visit a school first

Ian Cass is offended that local teachers would invite as speakers to their Feb. 27 conference "woolly-minded idiots . . . who exhort them towards the final destruction of the school system." Specifically, he refers to Laurier LaPierre and Dr. Arthur Pearl. He then lists several quotations entirely out of context and ignores completely the comments of the dozens of other speakers who attended the conference.

The teachers of this district invite speakers to conferences who will provide them with answers to the pressing educational problems of the day. Some solutions will be radical, some will be conservative and some will not be solutions at all. What is important is that the teachers sort, sift and analyze opinions in the hope that, when combined with their own experience, solutions or partial solutions to problems will be forthcoming.

I challenge Mr. Cass to visit some of our schools. I challenge him to find substantial evidence that teachers are ignoring the basics or that "new math" is substantially different from the "old math." Perhaps he could attend a senior scholarship class in English or social studies. If he still feels students cannot express a coherent thought, then I will listen to his criticism.

Mr. Cass, as do most critics of the educational system, simply criticizes. They do not offer solutions or even reasons why they feel the system is in trouble. I suggest the following should be considered:

Far more students are staying in school today than ever before. Why? There are at least two reasons — first, society is much more technical; and second, unskilled jobs are increasingly rare. The result is that schools are being asked to teach more and more technical skills to clients who have great difficulty assimilating the material. In the last 20 years the percentage of students staying to graduation has more than doubled.

This fact alone has fundamentally changed the nature of the students in our schools. Despite this change, schools have remained essentially academic institutions.

The challenge society and teachers face now is how to make schools meaningful to the ever-increasing numbers that will be forced to attend. We invite Mr. Cass's suggestions and the suggestions of other interested persons.

However, before they make suggestions or offer criticisms, why not visit a school? — Trevor Calkins, President, Greater Victoria Teachers' Association.

A cruel joke

On March 14 CHEK television presented several ads for jobs which had been given to them by the Canada Employment Center in Victoria. I followed up one of these jobs which was for an investment counselor. I called the manager of the firm who at first knew nothing of the ad or the job. After a while he suddenly realized that the job had long since been filled by someone coming up from the U.S., but was being advertised because this is the requirement.

This is the fourth supposed job opening which has been presented to me on this basis. The B.C. government is as guilty as the federal government in this regard. From what I understand, and according to what I have personally experienced, thousands of jobs are continuously posted which have already been filled by people inside and otherwise.

This business is a cruel joke on unemployed people. I wasted over three hours in travel and waiting time on one of these supposed openings just to see a counselor who confided in me that the job wasn't real. At the very least it is a large government expense which has no genuine basis. — Stewart A. Schoen, 1403-450 Simcoe Street.

Food production rises as population rate falls in Third World

The common-sense revolution

THE ECONOMIST

You might call it, yes, a great cultural revolution. But the real kind of revolution, when common sense tells enough people they've got to change their ways, and they have the technological means to do it. Unexpectedly, and most desirably, in almost all of Asia east of Pakistan food production is rising and human fertility is falling. Contraception and high-yield grain are producing, at last, a change in the general human condition.

This common-sense revolution is taking root in societies with ancient Chinese, Buddhist, Hindu and Malay civilizations, but not those where Christianity or Islam hold sway in the countryside. In most Catholic or Moslem villages, where a large family is equated with a man's worth and masculinity, little has changed. The Vatican's opposition to contraception, and the rise of Moslem fundamentalist groups all through the Islamic world, have helped to freeze attitudes in the hold-out regions.

Leaving cities

Elsewhere, chiefly in Asia's villages, four changes are happening at once. First, contraception is becoming more widely accepted. In places as widely scattered as India's Kerala state, Sri Lanka, China and Indonesia's Java and Bali, annual population growth rates have plummeted from 2½ — 3 per cent in the late 1960s to 1 — 1½ per cent now, mostly in the past five years. Elsewhere, though less spectacularly, fertility is declining for the first time in recent history.

Second, modern scientific-farming techniques — high-yield, fertilizer-intensive, fast-maturing wheat and rice strains, multiple cropping and year-round irrigation — are spreading fast, and are being accepted. Good harvests have eased food shortages. Even in two of Asia's poorest regions, both with some of the lowest rural incomes and densest populations on earth, rice production is going up rapidly — in Java by 4 per cent a year, in Bangladesh by 5 per cent.

Third, swollen great cities are disgorging some of their inhabitants. In a reversal of the long march out of the countryside and into the cities, armies of ex-peasants are leaving Jakarta and Calcutta to return to the villages which can once more feed and employ them. India's planning commission has ordered a study of this new phenomenon.

Lastly, the national economies of these largely peasant societies may be beginning to reflect the change. A World Bank report in September said that the non-oil-producing developing countries had expanded their economies by an average of 4.9 per cent in 1977 (and those between South Korea and Singapore by 6 — 12 per cent), against 3.5 per cent for the developed nations. Their exports rose 14 per cent in 1977 and their current-account deficits fell to $22 billion from $37.2 billion in 1975.

Paradoxically, the unsettling effects of rapid population growth may have been the catalyst which broke down the ingrained attitudes of long-settled communities of people living off the land. With village populations doubling every 30 years or so, their inherited design for living lost coherence, causing mass migration to the cities, social alienation, rising violence and even political upheaval. But the villages could not, by themselves, come to grips with population growth, because the necessary contraceptives and high-yield grain were not available to them until the late 1960s.

It seems to have been in the past 10 years that the villagers managed to get to grips with the problem, the past five years being decisive. China, for example, did not get the new seeds until 1973 and 1974, when 30,000 tons of American-developed, Mexican-bred seeds were quietly shipped in from Pakistan and Australia. In Java, villagers bitterly resisted contraception and scientific cultivation as recently as 1973; now they take both for granted.

China now leads the world's peasant societies in transforming traditional agriculture through irrigation, multiple cropping, pest control and waste recycling. But scientific farming gives India an even greater farming potential than China (or the United States, for that matter).

Women's lib

Modern farming is rapidly moving east from Islamic-influenced northwestern India into the Ganges plain towards Bengal. But while Punjabi peasants have been getting richer faster, making a shift from subsistence agriculture to mechanized modern farming in little over a decade, their ideas of male superiority have prevented fertility falling much. Spectacular falls in birth rates are instead moving up from the subcontinent's south. In largely Buddhist, poverty-ridden Sri Lanka, and India's poorest, most densely populated but best educated and most matriarchal state, Kerala, birth rates have quite suddenly plummeted by up to a quarter.

Although most of the Moslem world has not joined the new trend, parts of it have been affected. In some of Egypt's villages, for instance, a pharaonic women's lib seems to have surfaced among peasant women fighting for greater equality. The same pattern of rising productivity and falling fertility is emerging, if slowly. On the islands of Java and Bali, where the new rice has given Indonesia the highest per-acre yields in tropical Asia, the annual growth of population has dropped from 3 per cent to 1.4 per cent (and to 1.2 per cent in East Java and Bali alone), while food production has risen 3 per cent in the past 10 years. In rapidly industrializing east Asia, the picture is even better.

None of this cultural adjustment would have been possible without the technology needed to bring it about. Years of patient research went into producing the Mexican-bred wheat and the Philippine-bred rice. The Rockefeller and Ford foundations and many individual scientists and technicians and their institutions deserve credit for patiently slogging away, despite all the pessimism of the economic technocrats addicted to doom-laden computer forecasts.

It took money

Anthropologists, the people who have gone to villages the most and stayed the longest, guessed what was happening. But most of their findings were buried in scholarly journals or in university libraries. A huge network of family planning clinics, contraceptive depots, agricultural universities and research institutions (51 in India alone) had then to be set up. Insects adapt too, and new resistant grain varieties now have to be bred as fast as new biotypes and viruses come along.

It all took money. The rich nations never produced the 1 per cent of gnp that President Kennedy urged them in 1963 to give in aid to the poor world. The Americans are now down to a mean 0.22 per cent, a bit better than the Japanese, but a mite stingier than the Russians and West Germans. Britain, at 0.38 per cent, does better, but only Rumania, Sweden and Holland are just under or above 1 per cent. Yet, somehow, foreign aid started the job.

The president of the World Bank, Robert McNamara, gave warning last September that a total of 600 million people will be trapped in "absolute poverty" by the year 2000, below any definition of human decency. Perhaps. But if those 600 million people can adjust their culture and find a design for living that really fits the late 20th century — which is what is starting to happen in the villages of Asia — they will find ways not to go hungry, stay ignorant and sick, let their babies die or live short squalid lives. Times change and men, once they have the technological means and enough years to adjust, change with them.

On Language

Fighting the Chinese mailman

Nobody resents language change that comes about naturally; for example, people who once said of their mental state, "I'm hurting," now say, "I'm in pain," and we accept this as a normal turnover of vogue terms. But resentment and resistance set in when language change is dictated or promoted by government.

Last week, for example, The New York Times adopted the Pinyin system of converting Chinese characters into the Roman alphabet. Mao Tse-tung became Mao Zedong, and Teng Hsiao-ping became Deng Xiaoping (Teng, we hardly knew ye), because the government in Peking decided that its new spelling more faithfully represents the pronunciation of the language, and the United States and the United Nations agreed.

But The Times dug in its heels at four names: Peking will not become "Beijing" in its pages, nor will Canton become "Guangzhou", nor Inner Mongolia, "Nei Nonggol," and Tibet will certainly not be written Xizang (land of pizazz).

In a more subdued manner, the United States Postal Service has been pushing through a change in the way we abbreviate our states. No more three- or four-letter abbreviations: Two letters is all you're allowed. Thus, "Mass." becomes "MA," to go with Pennsylvania's "PA," and Mississippi goes along with a feminist trend from "Miss." to "MS." Alaskans are labelled, or libelled, "AK." Familiar two-letter abbreviations stay the same, without the periods — "DC" and "NJ" and "NY" and "KY," for example — but traditionalists find jarring such designations as "CT" for "Conn." and "IN" for "Ind." Letters to Kansas are to be sealed with a [illegible]

Under a zippy headline of "OH, But WY, ME?" columnist Neal Pierce objected: "The two-letter abbreviations are designated for confusion. . . . How are we to remember that AK stands for Alaska rather than Arkansas, that MI means Michigan, not Mississippi or Minnesota, that CO stands for Colorado rather than Connecticut, and NE is for Nebraska and not Nevada?"

A Postal Service spokesman, dedicated to the swift completion of his appointed state names, informs me that the abbreviations, which the postal people have been gently promoting since 1963, "are provided for use on addressing equipment that will not accommodate unusually long city and state names and the ZIP code."

In other words, the new abbreviations are a convenience to addressing machines. It saves money if the address is in fewer lines, so the Postal Service — desperate to get the companies to use the really necessary ZIP codes — gave back a little space on the state names.

I am not interested in making life easier for machines in general, or for junk mailers in particular, and will continue to write the whole "Iowa" rather than "IA," and the sunny "Calif." rather than the cold "CA."

In fairness to the mailman, we should recognize that he does not insist on the system. It's entirely voluntary. If you see the old abbreviations, or even if you laboriously write out the whole state name (at the cost of God knows how much trouble and ink), the mail will go through.

And here's the beauty part: As long as you use the right ZIP code, you do not have to write in the state or city at all. That is not generally known, even to addressing machines, and it's not a tip I would put to the test, but it's true.

Resistance to change by bureaucratic fiat — fighting the Chinese mailman — can be successful. A few years ago, the House Foreign Affairs Committee — jealous of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and vaguely embarrassed at the double meaning of "affairs" — changed its name to the more modern, stately, august "House International Relations Committee." Recently, the committee members officially changed it back to the old name: "It just didn't catch on," says Benjamin Rosenthal, D-NY (or Dem., N.Y.). "One of the members said that after 4 o'clock in the afternoon, he had a hard time remembering the name of the committee, so we said the hell with it and went back to House Foreign Affairs."

Why has "rhetoric" become a dirty word?

Not so long ago, the predominant meaning was "the art of expressive speech" or "the science of persuasion;" now, the much-abused word, with a root related to "oratory," is laden with artificiality: Empty talk is "mere" rhetoric.

"To those who call for an end to racial rhetoric, I say amen," amened New York City Mayor Ed Koch recently (faintly echoing a line of eight years ago that went, "The time may have come when the issue of race could benefit from a period of 'benign neglect' ")

But rhetoric, in its positive sense, fills a linguistic need: The technique of "artistic argument" is too much of a mouthful. If we mean "empty talk," or wish to deride the fulsome fulminations of a blowhard, we already have a large selection of sneering synonyms available: from the euphemism "bushwa" to the acronym "bomfog." ("ZIP," an acronym for Zone Improvement Plan," is written in all caps; "bomfog," an acronym for "brotherhood of man, fatherhood of God," is not — because it relies on its similarity to two small words.)

The most effective way to rehabilitate "rhetoric," I think, is to offer a colorful, yet suitably pedantic, term to cover its pejorative meaning. The word I have in mind is bloviation, a noun back-formed from the noun bloviate. (A verb is useful, too — you can't say "rhetoricize," and "orate" does not have the specifically spurious connotation.)

Bloviation is most often associated with the statements of Warren Gamaliel Harding — "Gamalielese," H. L. Mencken called it — but the word has deep roots as an authentic Americanism. In their 1889 Dictionary of Slang, Jargon and Cant, Albert Barrere and Charles Leland placed bloviate's origin before 1850, and defined it as "verbosity, wandering from the subject, and idle or inflated oratory or blowing, by which word it was probably suggested, being partially influenced by 'deviate.' "

So, if you mean "bloviating," get off "rhetoric's" back. We need "rhetoric" to do a job that no other word does as well.

STRAY FEATHERS

Heads up for the show of the year

If you've been keeping your head down lately you may not have noticed that things are happening overhead. No, it isn't the long-awaited return of the sun I'm thinking of, it's the first tentative signs that the greatest event in the birder's year — the spring migration — is about to get underway.

In other parts of Canada, this opening act starts much later than it does here — and with different performers. In Manitoba, we used to push the season along by searching for the first Horned Larks. To be truthful, the larks weren't strictly migrants. They'd wintered a couple of hundred miles farther south, in the Dakotas. All they needed was a mild spell in late February and winter weary Manitobans would begin to hear their lovely tinkling songs over the snowy land. If the weather turned sour again — and it usually did — the larks would hike right back to warmer climes.

But while we looked for larks and dutifully marked their arrival as the beginning of better days, it was the arrival of other birds, usually in late March or early April, that were the true harbingers of spring — the bona fide migrants.

Usually the first to show was the Crow. Sometimes a Robin did the trick, other times it might be a Meadowlark. Then again, on rare occasions, a Marsh hawk might be in the vanguard.

Here, none of these can be regarded as harbingers of spring. All spend the winter with us — Crows and Robins in big bunches, Meadowlarks and Marsh Hawks, rarely.

No, our little forerunners of the great hordes to come are swallows, usually Violet-green Swallows, sometimes with a smattering of Tree Swallows. And the reason I said you'd have to keep your head up is because they usually come in high, and if you haven't got an eye — or an ear — for the sky, you might miss them.

Ears are important because often — if the din of modern city life ever lets up long enough — you might just hear their joyful twittering as they dart back and forth in a cloudless sky.

But hearing them is one thing; seeing them is something else because they're often so high — and moving so fast — that they're mere specks against the blue.

Our swallows have been slowly making their way north along the coast for several weeks now — keeping up with spring as it were. Unlike their prairie counterparts, the swallows are not likely to have to turn back on account of the weather. Sure, we might get a brief setback, but it's never enough to turn our migrants around.

But just as exciting as the arrival of the first spring birds is the departure of the many thousands that have been with us all winter. This is where birders of Canada's west coast are doubly blessed. Not only can we mark the arrival of the swallows, Brant, White-crowned Sparrows and Yellow-rumped Warblers, but we can also note, possibly with a touch of sadness, that one day the Golden-crowned Sparrows who have graced our feeders for so many weeks have started their great annual journey too.

Spring, like Autumn, is exciting for another reason — anticipation. When a birder goes afield during this great avian game of musical chairs he can expect anything — and isn't often disappointed.

While birds turning up far from their normal haunts, or vast concentrations of birds, are the kinds of situations to be, if not expected, at least anticipated, there are other bonuses that can turn up. Like the one last weekend that threw a northerner and a southerner together briefly at Royal Oak when a Northern Shrike and a Rufus Hummingbird crossed paths.

But if you're going to catch any of this big show, you're going to have to start by keeping your head up.

Used Car Sales Jump Nearly 36%

OTTAWA (CP) — Increased activity on used car lots helped push the dollar value of all retail sales last December 9.7 per cent above those of December, 1977, Statistics Canada reports.

Retail sales in all sectors last December exceeded $7.4 billion, with all provinces showing increases.

Of the 28 sectors surveyed by Statistics Canada, used car sales showed the biggest increase — 35.8 per cent — from the previous December. Household furniture stores increased the dollar value of sales by 15.5 per cent and pharmacies, patent medicine and cosmetics stores increased their trade by 14.5 per cent.

Saskatchewan was the province showing the highest increase in value of sales — 16.7 per cent. Manitoba was the lowest at 3.9 per cent.

Seasonally-adjusted figures show retail sales at almost $6 billion for December, a 2.6-per-cent increase from December, 1977.

Seasonally-adjusted figures take into account annual erratic buying patterns caused by the seasonal changes.

600 Enumerators

About 600 enumerators will be hired in the Victoria federal constituency in advance of the federal election.

Applicants submit their names to the local Liberal or Conservative party.

By federal law, names of enumerators are submitted to the returning officer by the two political parties receiving the greatest number of votes in the riding in the last federal election.

Phone numbers to apply are: Conservative, Mrs. A. Ashford at 384-5806 or Liberal, Mrs. L.F. Dunn at 383-4582.

Mothballed B.C. Ferry May Float on Hood Canal

The Sunshine Coast Queen ferry — in mothballs for the past three years — may find a new home in Washington State.

The U.S. Defence Department has approved Washington State's request for an emergency exemption from the Jones Act so that two B.C. ferries can be used to help handle the traffic crush caused by the collapse of the Hood Canal floating bridge.

The act prohibits vessels under foreign registry from operating between American ports. Exemptions are rarely granted and then only when it is in the national interest.

The exemption would allow the state to buy or lease the 200-car capacity Sunshine Cost Queen and the 50-car capacity San Diego.

The San Diego, formerly the Klondike, is privately owned. It is currently berthed in Burrard Inlet.

Although both vessels were built in the U.S., they are now Canadian registered.

B.C. Ferries information officer Betty Nicholson said today that the Washington State ferry system had no available vessels to help in the Hood Canal bridge problem.

They looked at the Queen of Surrey, Sunshine Coast Queen, a number of private vessels and at ships in other countries trying to come up with the best deal.

They seemed most interested in the Sunshine Coast Queen, she said.

But Washington had to get clear of the Jones Act before any serious negotiations could take place, she said.

Now that permission has been granted, B.C. Ferries is waiting to hear from the Washington State ferries people.

The Queen of New Westminster replaced the Sunshine Coast Queen on the Gibsons-Horseshoe Bay run in December, 1976, leaving the smaller vessel in limbo. For most of the time since then, she has been berthed at the Dease Slough refit dock.

Nicholson said if the two ferry corporations get together, any deal either to lease or buy would have to be approved by both the B.C. Ferries board of directors and the provincial cabinet.

Lockout Notice In Steel

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Metal Industries Association served 72-hour lockout notice Friday to 1,300 Steelworkers at 37 metal industry plants in the Vancouver area.

A spokesman for the association, which bargains for the 37 plants, said that a substantial majority of member companies voted in favor of the lockout. He said the association hopes the threat will make the United Steel Workers of America resume bargaining to avoid a confrontation.

Uranium Halt Urged

KELOWNA (CP) — Credibility of the provincial government and its royal commission on uranium mining will suffer unless a moratorium on uranium exploration is declared, a member of the Greenpeace Foundation said Friday.

Peter Chataway told the first informal hearing of the royal commission inquiry into uranium mining that exploration often not only involves searching for uranium, but setting up a pit for mining.

"We're not clear on just where the line is drawn between exploration and mining," said Dr. James Murray, a geology professor at the University of British Columbia and one of three royal commission members.

Italian Liner Eyed as Hotel

VANCOUVER (UPC) — City council is studying a plan to convert a $100-million Italian luxury cruise liner into a floating hotel as the centrepiece of the proposed downtown trade and convention centre, a city hall spokesman said Friday. The 761-foot ship Leonardo da Vinci is the flagship of the Italian Line, with 500 staterooms, five swimming pools, tennis courts and a cinema, he said. Council was told earlier by entrepreneur Henry Polacco that the Italian Navy is offering a long-term lease on the ship.

W.A.C. Books

KELOWNA (CP) — The board of Okanagan Community College has approved a plan to create a W. A. C. Bennett memorial collection for the college library. Principal Ron Jeffels said Friday he will write letters to prominent Canadian political figures asking them to donate a book from their personal libraries that deals with some aspect of Canadian life.

Honesty Urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal and B.C. governments should be candid with the Canadian public about their policy on where a West Coast oil port should be located, the head of a now-completed federal inquiry into the issue says. Dr. Andrew Thompson said the governments now should announce what responses it intends to make to a decision on a location for an oil port by the United States government expected this December.

Closure Defied

VANCOUVER (CP) — Local lumberyard owners say they will obey a city council order to close on Sundays, but a furniture store operator says he will remain open because council has no legal basis to enforce the closures. Under council guidelines, only stores in the Chinatown and Gastown areas can open on Sundays, as well as record stores, book stores and souvenir shops. Bernie Cobin, who operates The Warehouse furniture store, said his firm is prepared to fight the matter in court.

Improving B.C. Taste In Wine A Problem

Wineries and fish processing plants are the only B.C. food processing industries capable of supplying domestic requirements, an agriculture study has found.

The standing committee on agriculture's latest report said British Columbians sipped almost two gallons of wine per capita in 1977, the highest of any Canadian province and consistently higher than consumption in the U.S.

But as wine becomes more popular, tastes become more sophisticated and the vineyards are facing a problem trying to keep pace.

Consumers are drifting away from the light pop wines which form a major part of B.C. production and to which the local variety of grapes are best suited.

The development of a grape juice industry will help alleviate the problem, the report says.

Although the fish processing industry receives some praise for supplying B.C. needs, the report's analysts wonders if the industry is capable of taking advantage of the extra potential created by the extended boundaries to 200 miles.

Pay Hike Leads To Fine for Theft

VANCOUVER (CP) — The manager of a provincially-funded organization which provides homes and rehabilitation services for errant juveniles has been fined $1,000 in county court for theft.

In the decision, Judge Jack Anderson also placed manager Joan Urselman on nine months probation and ordered her to make $3,500 restitution to the Richmond Friendship Home Society.

Crown counsel James Blair said Urselman accepted a wage increase and other financial benefits that she was not authorized to accept and that she should not have accepted.

UIC, Maternity Incentive Allowed

VANCOUVER (CP) — A federal court justice has ruled that the Unemployment Insurance Commission (UIC) cannot force women members of a union here to repay UIC benefits because they also received incentive money from employers during maternity leave.

The ruling by Mr. Justice Hugh Gibson allows members of the Association of University and College Employees (AUCE) to receive incentive money if they return to their jobs after maternity leave, even if they received UIC benefits during the leave.

The 20,000-member British Columbia Government Employees' Union (BCGEU) said it will attempt to negotiate a similar benefit as a result of the decision.

"It's a very significant decision," said BCGEU collective bargaining director Cliff Andstein, adding that a standard is set for the private sector when the government agrees to something in a labor contract with its employees.

Incentive payments, designed to get experienced workers to return to their jobs after pregnancy, are made up of the difference between the UIC benefits received for a maximum of 16 weeks and the wages the women would normally have earned over the same period.

The dispute between AUCE and the commission results from contracts settled at the University of B.C. in 1974 and Simon Fraser University in 1975 which included clauses entitling women returning from maternity leave to an incentive payment.

Initially the UIC verbally approved the clauses but in 1976 a woman was told she must repay some unemployment benefits because she had received incentive money. Eventually, however, the union was supporting 100 women, all of whom were asked to repay between $1,200 and $2,000.

Budget Under 5%

The provincial budget for the 1979-80 fiscal year will be within the five per cent guidelines imposed on municipalities, regional districts and hospitals, Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said Friday.

The Canadian Press carried an erroneous report Thursday saying that the finance minister had indicated the budget would exceed $5 billion this year.

"The budget will not exceed $5 billion," Wolfe said. "I never said at any time to anybody that it was going to be $5 billion."

The minister said the reporter apparently added the five per cent to $4.8 billion instead of the actual budget of $4.28 billion, and arrived at something over $5 billion.

Greenpeace Quits Hunt

ST. ANTHONY, Nfld. (UPC) — The Greenpeace Foundation has abandoned its protests against the annual Newfoundland seal hunt saying the movement may have to re-evaluate its strategy in view of government rulings which kept protesters away from the hunt.

The last four group members flew out of St. Anthony Friday in a rented Cessna aircraft after deciding government regulations barring them from the pack ice had limited the value of their protest.

The group's only permit to observe the slaughter was revoked Wednesday when Ed Chavies, of Boston, flew to the ice and sprayed green dye on the only seal pup he could find.

The dye was intended to render the seal's pelt worthless to the hunters.

Chavies and two other Greenpeace members flew out of St. Anthony Thursday with the group's helicopter.

John Frizzell, head of the Greenpeace contingent, said before leaving that ever more stringent government regulations limiting on-ice activities made it doubtful Greenpeace would return next year, although no final decision has been made.

"We're going back to our respective homes. We're a pretty tired lot right now and we just want to relax a little and assess what has happened.

"Basically, we are going now to focus on the market for the pelts. We are going to trace where these pelts go and make consumers aware where the fur comes from."

Federal fisheries department spokesman Ed Quigley said the Norwegian sealers had bagged 14,751 seal pups.

Theft, Fraud Made Simple

OTTAWA (UPC) — The federal Law Reform Commission Friday recommended changing 30 lengthy sections of the Criminal Code dealing with theft and fraud and replacing them with 14 brief ones without altering the substance of the law.

In a report entitled Theft and Fraud, the Commission recommended six offences dealing with dishonest acquisition should remain in the Criminal Code in their original state. They are theft, dishonest taking, robbery, blackmail, fraud and dishonest obtaining.

The report also proposed to replace vague terms such as "fraudulently, without color of right," and "with intent to deprive," with "common-sense" terms that are easily understood.

"There has been constructed a mass of artificial, technical and detailed provisions whose complexity is indefensible and highly detrimental," the report said.

"It obscures the basic message of this area of criminal law, it places unnecessary burden on those who administer the criminal justice system, and it threatens to drive an unnecessary wedge between morality and criminal law."

The commission headed by Francis Muldoon also reported that theft should simply be "dishonestly appropriating without consent," and robbery should be redefined as "theft or dishonest taking with violence."

The Criminal Code offences dealing with fraud-related crimes such as obtaining property or credit by false pretence would be simplified into one offence along with the section on fraud itself, the report said.

"The draft concept of fraud, however, neither narrows nor extends existing law, it merely merges the three main Code offences."

Under current terms in the Code, fraud is not complete unless the offender gets something.

Trudeau Lashed for 'Creep' Slur

Times News Services

Prime Minister Trudeau is in hot water for calling a Vancouver student a creep, with one MP telling him to apologize to the student and another saying that — by definition — the Liberal party is composed of creeps.

Progressive Conservative MP Tom Cossitt wanted the Commons to set aside its normal business Friday so MPs could debate Trudeau's display of temper Thursday during a question-and-answer session with University of British Columbia students.

Commons Speaker James Jerome prevented Cossitt, a frequent critic of Trudeau, from introducing his motion.

Former prime minister John Diefenbaker said he was interested in finding the meaning of "creep".

Sour Relations Seen if Airline Bumped

OTTAWA (UPC) — External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson warns a British government move to toss Air Canada out of London's Heathrow Airport would have a "spillover effect" on relations between the two Commonwealth nations.

"We are not threatening the British government in any way," Jamieson told the House of Commons Friday. "If there is failure on the part of the British to accomodate Canadian interests in this matter, obviously it will have a spillover effect on the matters involving both countries.

The British government informed Air Canada last month that it will have to move to London's Gatwick Airport, located some 40 miles southeast of London, to ease crowded conditions at Heathrow, Britain's gateway to Europe.

"There are a wide range of alternatives open to the govenment and to Air Canada in the event the British government refuses to cooperate," he said.

Jamieson said Air Canada should remain at Heathrow because the airline was one of the first carriers to occupy Heathrow

Yukon Provincial Status After Claims Set: Natives

Settlement of northern Indian land claims must come before the Yukon Territory gains provincial status, a native spokesman said here this week.

Dayle MacDonald of the Council of Yukon Indians said in an interview the Yukon is at a crossroads. The federal government can continue to promote non-renewable resource development and suffer the social-economic ills of a boom-bust economy, or respect the historical rights of the native people by making developers pay the full costs with policies encouraging economic and social independence, she said.

But for success, this understanding must come before provincial status, MacDonald said. Her people have more faith in the territorial council administered by the federal government than they would have in a two-level system of government.

"There are people on the territorial council now with no sympathy or understanding of native problems," she said. A provincial government could bring worse, plus the added burden of dealing with Ottawa.

She noted the Progressive Conservative party indicates it favors granting provincial status if returned to power in the next election.

MacDonald was accompanied by Jim Antoine, a chief of the Dene nation in the Mackenzie River valley, as emissaries of a Northern Native Rights Campaign that opened simultaneously in Victoria, Vancouver and Ottawa.

Position papers were given on aboriginal rights, political self-determination, constitutional amendment, India Act revision, the Alaska gas pipeline, hydro projects, mining, a polar gas pipeline and liquefied natural gas tankers.

Six teams of speakers have begun a cross-Canada tour of major centres to appeal to southern Canadians for support in their struggle for recognition.

A program of public meetings and informal discussions on Vancouver Island began Friday at Camosun College and over the next six days will include Sunday church appearances at St. John the Baptist, Colwood, and St. Stephen and St. Mary, Saanichton; a Monday noon drop-in at the University of Victoria; evening at Salt Spring Island, Chemainus and Courtenay-Comox; Tuesday at First United Church and St. John's Church; Wednesday back at UVic classes and a noon forum at St. John's, open house at St. Michael's and All Angels on West Saanich Road, and evening meeting in Port Alberni.

Antoine will speak Thursday noon to Victoria Rotary Club, and a dinner and discussion for Project North and campaigners will be held at a private location.

"I think we can help a lot in gaining support of southern groups," MacDonald said.

The churches already have some organization directed to northern Indian needs, such as through the World Development Education program, which is sponsoring a dinner for campaigners and special guests at St. John's hall Tuesday night.

Antoine said there are several groups, but all northern natives are in the same boat in respect to claims for recognition and self-development. The Nishgas, for example, have been striving for settlement of their territorial rights for 100 years, but are no further ahead than the Yukon and Dene people who have campaigned only in the last decade, he said.

Before The Judge

Three persons charged Friday with possession of heroin for the purpose of trafficking were remanded in custody by Judge Blake Allan until Tuesday for bail hearings.

Charged jointly and separately were Jeffrey Michael Burant, of 315 Montreal, Janet Christine Stocker, 24, and Geoffrey Charles Weymouth, 25, both of 1557 Oak Bay Avenue.

Stocker and Weymouth were also jointly charged with the same offence.

An RCMP drug squad raid on a James Bay residence produced 25 grams of heroin with a street value of $30,000.

Judge William Ostler fined a 29-year-old man $350 and placed him on 18 months' probation for a break-in at a medical building Feb. 21.

Mark Scoular Hemmingsen, of 1682 Whiffin Spit, had pleaded guilty to breaking and entering the Medical Arts building, 1105 Pandora, with a 23-year-old female. The pair was caught inside the building by Victoria city police, who were responding to an alarm shortly after midnight.

Lora Petula Bethell, of the same address, pleaded guilty to the charge Feb. 23 and was sentenced March 9.

A 21-year-old man was fined $300 after pleading guilty to failing to remain at the scene of an accident Jan. 20.

Mulligan said John Robert Vantreight, of 340 Island Highway, was involved in an accident shortly before 11 p.m. on Hampton Road.

A car which was forced off the road and into a steep ditch had $1,000 damage while Vantreight's vehicle received $1,500 damages.

Saanich police tracked a trail of fluid and debris from the scene of the accident to where Vantreight parked the car.

Mulligan said Vantreight reported his car stolen later that night but admitted the next day he was the driver at the time of the accident, panicked and left the scene.

No Bail in Arson Case

VANCOUVER (CP) — A provincial court judge refused Friday to set bail for a man charged with 11 arson-related offences in the wake of a flurry of firebombings in the Vancouver area.

Gyula Bela Demjan, 47, an unemployed cleaner, was remanded in custody until Wednesday.

Demjan was charged earlier this week with two arson-related offences and mischief but police laid eight additional charges Friday.

The original charges were laid after a citizens'-band radio club member made a citizen's arrest of a man after a firebomb was thrown into a downtown Vancouver federal building.

There have been 22 firebombings in the last three months in the Vancouver area. Police revealed Wednesday that they were using volunteers to watch possible firebomb attack areas.

Most frequent targets were financial institutions and federal buildings.

Aid to Pensions?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pension increases could be more closely tied to inflation if more people could be persuaded to work past age 65, the president of Fidelity Life Assurance Co. said

PERSIAN RUG SALE
(Late arrival of Shipment #A.B. 6055 From Vancouver Home Show— First Public Viewing and Sale)

IF: There is a Persian rug on the floor. What does that tell you about its owner? Probably that he is well off. Also, he'll be a secure person because a Persian Rug is a good saleable item in these inflation ridden times. It is easier to sell expensive Oriental carpets today in a sluggish economy than it was in the 1950's and 60's although the average price of an authentic Oriental carpet has greatly increased in recent years. An Oriental rug is an excellent hedge against inflation because its value increases constantly. The reason for this is the increased wealth and industrialization of Mid-East countries. Weavers and master artists are leaving their traditional work and are entering industrial employment. In addition the Shah of Iran had introduced compulsory education thereby effectively eliminating the employment of children in rug weaving, says Ejaz Khan of Bokhara Carpet Palace Ltd. Mr. Kahn will be dislaying an excellent selection of Persian carpets & rugs that will appeal to the discriminating and budget conscious home decorator and art lovers, offered to you at Bargain Prices. Mr. Khan invites you to come and investigate the opportunities provided by Oriental carpets, to make an investment that safeguards your money and provides you with luxury as it appreciates.

'Plot' Halts Wheat Trading

WASHINGTON (WP) — Fear that a handful of speculators were trying to corner the market in wheat and jack up prices Friday shut down the wheat trading pits of the Chicago Board of Trade.

It was the first time ever that the Chicago board — the heart of the U.S. grain market — stopped trading because of an apparent attempt to manipulate price, industry sources said.

The Chicago board trades not in actual bushels of wheat but in futures contracts, each calling for delivery of a boxcar of wheat at a specified date.

Late Wedneday night, the Commodity Futures Trading Commission declared an emergency in the market and halted trading in wheat for delivery this month. The Board of Trade then halted all wheat futures trading until late Friday when trading resumed for an hour in all but the March contracts.

Over objections from the Board of Trade, the CFTC Friday night froze the price of wheat for March Delivery at $3.76 3-4 cents per bushel, the price on Thursday.

CFTC officials said they acted after finding that three wheat speculators had purchased more than 80 percent of the contracts for March delivery.

In all, speculators held contracts calling for delivery of 11.8 million bushels of wheat, the CFTC said. But only 2 million bushels were available in the Chicago area for delivery by next Wednesday, the day trading in March futures contracts ends. (On the last day of trading, the person who sold a contract must either deliver the grain or pay off the contract holder in cash, based on the current price.)

With such a severe shortage of wheat, the three speculators who held most of the wheat contracts would be able to "squeeze" the market, forcing up the price and making millions of dollars in profits.

Because prices would be pushed up only temporarily, consumers would not necesarily pay higher prices for flour or other wheat products, CFTC officials said.

Straits Spill Survey Urged

Oil spills could occur if a proposal by Northern Tier Pipeline Co. for a $1.5 billion oil port goes ahead at Port Angeles, a member of Sooke Bluepeace said Friday.

Jo-Ann Morris said spills could have wide-ranging economic impacts on southern Vancouver Island since Port Angeles is directly across from Victoria in the Juan de Fuca Strait.

In view of this, she added, the federal government should provide an environmental impact statment on the effects of such an oil port.

Under a legislative timetable set out by U.S. Congress, President Jimmy Carter is required to pick one of several competing pipeline routes by December.

Besides the Northern Tier project, the other proposals include the Kitimat pipeline which could cost about $500 million.

A second proposal by Westcoast Transmission Co. of Vancouver and Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co. of Calgary, would move oil from Skagway on the Alaskan Panhandle over a new 710-mile route connecting with existing Canadian and U.S. piplines.

Nothing intrigues a journalist quite as much as a voice on the other end of the telephone saying: "The truth hasn't been told yet . . . ."

The lady behind the voice was Glenda Osborne of the nearly departed but since reborn Victorian Celebrations Society.

You probably thought the VCS was dissolved and dead after president Helen Beirnes resigned Jan.24 taking nine other executive members with her. Obviously, Ms. Beirnes and friends thought so, too.

"That was their intention as they took with them all the Society's files, office keys and financial records," said Glenda who was left with a mini executive of herself, husband Ossie Osborne and June Beane, and a $12,000 debt. Exit the VCS?

No. Onward they have pressed, regrouping their forces, amending the constitution to allow for a five-member board instead of 13 and electing new officers with Ms. Beane as president. Right now the Victorian Celebrations Society has 61 paid-up members (it's $2 to join), plans fund-raising drives to pay off the debt, and still wants to be the city's organizer of festivals.

That could be a tricky task since the 10 who walked out have formed a new organization called the Greater Victoria Festivals Society with Ms. Beirnes as president.

When she left the VCS, Ms. Beirnes said the Society's 240 members would be invited to join the new organization. Ms. Osborne said they can't. Not as individuals.

"There is no room for ordinary membership in the Festivals Society," she pointed out. "It's only for corporate memberships — local businesses and things like the Chamber of Commerce. That's all their constitution allows for, apart from a few temporary advisers."

The truth that hasn't been told, said Ms. Osborne is the fact that the decision by the 10 to resign and form a new body was never taken to the membership of the society and, in fact, the members did not want to dissolve the VCS.

"You can't dissolve a society while it owes money," she pointed out. "It's against the law — contrary to the B.C. Societies Act."

At the crux of the squabble is the right to run the annual Victorian Days Parade. With Ossie Osborne then at the helm, the VCS staged what were considered excellent parades in 1977 and '78 but some members (including the Osbornes) who had been to observe festivals from Hawaii to Alaska, wanted new ideas to be injected.

"Others like Ms. Beirnes and Allan Houghton wanted to keep things just the way they'd been for 40 years, however, and when they were elected president and vice-president of the VCS last October, the trouble started," said Ms. Osborne.

"It was so terribly frustrating. All we kept hearing was the phrase 'that won't work here!' But the experienced officials at other major events will tell you that you have to change a festival every three years to keep the interest up. And the secret of a good festival is to have more people participation in events. Otherwise it's just a flat show to watch."

If the Victorian Celebrations Society wants a parade it looks like it will have to start a new one of its own for city hall, the Chamber of Commerce and the Visitors Information Centre have smiled on the Greater Victoria Festivals Society.

The new group has been granted a permit by the city to stage this year's Victorian Days Parade. Unable to get to its files to prepare an outline of its parade program, the VCS missed the Feb.28 deadline to apply for a permit.

"Because of the circumstances, we were allowed to submit a written proposal late and an application for a permit, but we haven't heard back from City Hall yet," Ms. Osborne explained.

At this stage it makes little difference, however. Round One of the Great Parade Battle has been won.

The VCS will be content to just sponsor events in this year's parade and may stage its own parade at a different time of the year. It won't try to put on a rival parade during Victorian Days.

Pity. The vision of two opposing parades advancing on each other from different ends of Douglas Street and hopefully demolishing a few of those brass bands as they clash at about The Bay, had started to excite me

Age of Aquariums Dawns

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

Goldfish, angel fish and red-finned Caribbean gaspers don't mess the carpet, don't bark in the wee, small hours and don't cost a heck of a lot to keep.

That's maybe why more and more people are turning to tropical fish and aquariums as a hobby.

Mind you, if you get into the really exotic breeds, the price can go up, but by and large it's a hobby that needn't cost an arm or a leg unless you get into pirhanas.

For these reasons and others (there's something therapeutic about gazing at a tankful of tiny fish going about their business) buying and raising tropical fish in fresh and salt water aquariums is the fastest growing pet hobby in North America.

So says a lady who should know, Vivienne Beswick, an executive member of the Victorian Aquarium Society.

"The reason is more and more people are living in apartments and find it difficult to try to keep pets like dogs or cats," Beswick says. "So they turn to aquariums."

Beswick, a long-time aquarist, is helping to organize the association's annual show which opens Monday and runs through to March 24 at theHillside Shopping Centre.

"There will be about 75 entries, including some unusual fish," she said.

"It will be one of the best shows ever held in Victoria."

Talking to Beswick it's easy to see why keeping tropical fish has become such a popular hobby.

There are all kinds of exotic species.

There's the Fire Eel, a black fish with red stripes which may grow 14 inches long or the Ghost Knife fish which has dorsal fins on the bottom instead of on top.

There also seems to be no end to the discovery of new species.

"They are still finding new species in Africa, and South America," Beswick says.

Beswick says most people start with fresh water tropical fish, which usually are on the easiest to look after.

"The salt water fish are more beautiful, but a person should acquire some experience in maintaining an aquarium before getting involved," she said.

The price for fresh water tropical fish ranges from 15 cents to $85 and for the salt water variety, from about $2 to $100.

"But, of course, some rare species are even more expensive and can cost $400 or more," Beswick points out.

"But it's very much a watching hobby. You can watch them for hours. And the fish, of course, get as much pleasure — they watch you."

She said many doctors are starting to place aquariums in reception rooms because of the relaxing effects on their patients.

As in any other hobby, beginners should buy good equipment and invest in a book on keeping fish.

"Don't buy anything cheap and you won't run into trouble."

She also urges newcomers to join the association where they can get advice from experienced aquarists.

Seven Held In Drug Raids

Illegal drugs worth about $20,000 were seized by police in separate Vancouver Island raids Friday.

Seven persons, including a man and woman picked up by Oak Bay police Friday night, are in custody.

The other five were arrested earlier in the day after members of the Victoria and Duncan RCMP drug squads seized four ounces of cocaine with a street value of about $13,000 from a Mill Bay business premises.

An Oak Bay police spokesman said today an officer on patrol stopped a man in the 1800-block Oak Bay Avenue about 8 p.m. and found a quantity of drugs including 20 caps of ground magic mushroom, 65 Tai sticks, and five ounces of marijuana in his car.

About three hours later, officers searched a house at 2080 Milton and seized a kilo of marijuana, 25 more Tai sticks, another loose baggie of marijuana, two caps of an unknown drug as well as a set of scales and a number of small plastic baggies.

A woman was then taken into custody.

The man and woman have been charged with possession of marijuana for the purposes of trafficking.

Police said another house was searched but nothing was found.

In the Mill Bay incident the five persons have been charged with possession of cocaine and conspiring to traffic in cocaine.

Charles Carl Maiale, 34, of Duncan, Brian William Harte, 28, of Quesnel, Clark Joseph Perry, 29, of North Vancouver, and Keith Washington, 30, and Patricia Somerville, 26, both of Mill Bay, appeared in Duncan provincial court and were remanded in custody until early next week for plea and bail application.

Rally All Set

Victoria Ald. Larry Ryan wants the rules for use of the Newcombe Auditorium revised and clarified.

Trade unions will stage a protest rally in the auditorium at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday to protest expansion of essential services legislation.

Auditorium directors at first approved the rally, then vetoed it, saying it wasn't appropriate for the museum.

Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis intervened to allow the meeting to go ahead.

"We appreciated the stand taken by Mr. Curtis," Ryan said today.

But Ryan added that the problem wouldn't have arisen in the first place if the rules were clear.

Present regulations state that all meetings must be in some way related in character to the museum but the rule has been bent for some organizations and not for others.

Grouse Nest Owners Fighting Foreclosure

The owners of the luxurious Grouse Nest estate at East Sooke will make a last ditch effort Monday in the Supreme Court of Canada in Ottawa to stave off a forecl-soure action that has been pending for nearly two years.

Victoria lawyer Rodney Taylor will appear for owners Hasaam and Lenore Kamil in their petition that seeks a hearing on a B.C. Court of Appeals decision.

The Appeals Court, in January, upheld an order absolute issued by the B.C. Supreme Court in Vancouver on June 2, 1978.

The order granted Laurel Properties Ltd. of Vancouver a writ of possession to seize the 560-acre, multi-million dollar property after Grouse Nest Resorts Ltd. defaulted on a $1,350,000 mortgage issued in March 1976.

A lump-sum payment of $1,700,000 was due in March, 1977, but Ken Yule, a Vancouver lawyer representing Laurel Properties said nothing was paid then, nor have any payments been made since.

Yule said the interest payment alone on the mortgage — at 24 per cent per year — works out to $1,100 a day. The debt now exceeds $2.5 million. In addition, Grouse Nest hasn't paid corporate income taxes for 1977 and 1978, he said. The bill totals $59,000 plus interest.

Two deputy sheriffs with moving vans arrived at the Grouse Nest property Tuesday to serve the writ but left an hour later when Taylor managed to get an injunction through County Court Judge Leslie Cashman acting as a local judge of the B.C. Supreme Court.

Yule said the injunction was unusual in as much as it was given ex parte, that is without notice to Laurel Properties or any affadvit material supporting the application.

The injunction orders a stay of execution of the writ for an unspecified time.

Laurel Properties asked the Supreme Court in Vancouver Thursday to set aside the injunction but the matter was adjourned to next Tuesday, the day following the Ottawa court hearing.

Yule said Laurel Properties started its foreclosure action in May, 1977.

Two months later the company obtained an order nisi which gave Grouse Nest six months to come up with the money or forfeit the property.

When the redemption period expired in January, 1978, the Kamils applied for, and got, a three-month extension from the commissioner for corporate income tax. The extension was to allow more time to pay 1976 taxes due.

During that period the Kamils tried unsuccessfully to sell the property and on June 2, 1978 Laurel Properties finally obtained its order absolute to seize the land and buildings.

The Kamils appealed for another extension but it was turned down by the Supreme Court on Sept. 5, 1978. That subsequently lead to the Appeals Court hearing.

Yule said Grouse Nest tried to prevent the order from being registered by filing volumes of papers with the land registry office.

But time, it appears, ran out this week.

Kamil bought the property in the early '60s and proceeded to convert the place into a plush resort.

Blaze Cause Probed

City fire officials are investigating the cause of an early morning blaze that caused $13,000 damage to Harvey's Meat Market, 2709 Quadra.

The fire, reported at 2:34 a.m., broke out by the side of a smoke house at the rear of the building.

Investigators are uncertain whether the blaze was deliberately set or was caused by a malfunction in a refrigerator unit on the outside of the building.

Firefighters Angered By Layoff Plan

And if it happens sparks will fly, Terry Erskine, president of the Saanich firefighters' union warned today.

Council's budget committee was told Friday that if the municipality can't get an exemption from the provincial government's five per cent limitation on municipal spending, cutbacks would have to receive serious consideration.

Mayor Mel Couvelier, noting that salaries account for more than 95 per cent of the fire department's budget, indicated a head-on collision with the spending limitation guideline is inevitable.

However, Erskine warned the municipality had better be prepared for a fight if any move is taken to reduce staff.

"This isn't a fool-around game," he said. "If we fight, the blast will be blown off the Richter Scale."

Erskine said the level of fire services shouldn't be determined by budget increases but rather by the fire needs of the municipality.

"In Saanich if we look at the ratio of population to manpower we are already undermanned," he said.

Fire Chief Art Fryer has tendered a $2,651,970 budget for the next fiscal year, an increase of 12.4 per cent over the current budget. Firefighters' salaries amount to $1,942,000, an increase of $220,000. In addition administrative staff costs have been pegged at $311,000 and $21,000 set aside for overtime.

Several aldermen were appalled at the thought of cutting back staff.

Ald. Fred Severson, a member of the Victoria fire department, called it a backward step and Ald. John Mika questioned whether the municipality should be bound to the province's spending limitation edict.

"Are we going to agree with a policy that will see us cutting emergency services for our ratepayers?" he asked.

It's the Greatest Show On Sea

The biggest outdoors show in the Pacific Northwest is now playing.

Colossal, stupendous and tremendous are only some of the words which have been used to describe the show, set against the background of the open Pacific at Long Beach where the roar of the combers along the sandy and rocky coast never ceases.

For from now until mid-April, about 13,000 Gray whales and their young will pass close to the 18-mile shoreline of Pacific Rim National Park between Ucluelet and Tofino.

They will be seen sprouting, rolling, fluking and breaching, within one kilometer of the land.

The mammals, averaging 44-feet in length and weighing about 31-tons each, are migrating to the Arctic from Baja California, Mexico where they winter.

"They arrive in groups, reminding you of a flotilla," said a physician who has watched them year after year.

"They almost seem to know they are being watched and enjoy it."

Park superintendent Frank Camp, said the park staff sighted the first whales in mid-February but the best time to seem them en masse is between now and mid-April.

"At the migration's peak which this year coincides with the Easter weekend, more than 100 whales a day will pass close to the rocky headlands flanking the beach," Camp said.

He said school and university groups are organizing camping trips to the park especially to view the whales.

To assist visitors in locating the best spots for viewing the whales, park naturalists are preparing whale-watching kits, he said.

Life-studies on the Gray whales show they spend half their lives migrating.

The annual round trip, covering 20,000 kilometers, begins in the Arctic Ocean each fall, and two [illegible] later they arrive in the warm shallow lagoons of Baja, California, where the females give birth to calves.

The return migration starts in February and cows with new-born calves are among the last to leave,

Research over the last five years also indicates that a number of them feed in the shallow inshore waters of Pacific Rim National Park, and that some return year after year.

Summer visitors may also see whales from shore but the sight is not nearly as spectacular as the spring migration.

Since the mid-nineteenth century, the species [illegible] come close to extinction several times.

In 1850 the Gray whale population was estimated at 15,000 yet by 1885 their numbers were down to several hundred.

Whalers turned their attention to other species, giving the whales a chance to recover, but by the early 1900s, they again became the target of hunters who slaughtered them in their breeding grounds.

Hunting again brought the whales close to extinction by 1937 but that year a ban was imposed as they numbered only 250. Since then they have increased to 13,000.

GETTING SCOTT TO SLOW DOWN... ...MAJOR PROBLEM FOR HER COACH

Debbie Just Wants to Run

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

Ron Bowker's problem isn't getting Debbie Scott to run; it's getting her to stop long enough to catch her breath.

Bowker coaches Scott, a 20-year-old, second-year student at UVic who has emerged as one of Canada's premier female distance runners in just 4½ years.

The 5'8", 108-pound brunette ran her first footrace in Grade 11 at Claremont secondary. Her coach there, Peter Simmonds, spotted her potential immediately and within two years she had won almost every honor possible at her best distances, 1,500 and 3,000 metres.

Simmonds steered Scott to Bowker in the spring of 1975, when she joined the Esquimalt Track Club.

"Peter told me about her as soon as he saw her run," Bowker related. "It was her attitude, what she was willing to put into running, that made her stand out."

Simply put, it was hard work that propelled Debbie to the point where she won the national cross-country trials last weekend at Beacon Hill Park to select a team of six Canadians for the women's world cross-country championships Sunday, March 25, over 5,000 metres in Limerick, Ireland.

Debbbie along with Shauna Miller and Diane Cameron of Calgary, Maureen Crowley of Vancouver, Lynn Kanuka of Saskatoon, Nancy Rooks of Toronto and Bowker as coach, leave for Ireland Tuesday.

Canada has not finished well in past world championships, so Bowker will settle for improvement. Top countries are Romania, which won last year, the U.S., which finished second, and Russia.

"Debbie's strong point is her attitude, her psychological approach," said Bowker. "It's what has enabled her to develop her physical abilities.

"Most of the abilities needed in distance running are the type you can develop in training rather than the type you're born with. That's what makes the psychological approach so important."

Debbie played volleyball and field hockey at Claremont, "but her level of aspiration surpassed those of most of her team-mates in those sports," Bowker explained. "She had to turn to an individual sport.

"The biggest job to coaching athletes like Debbie is not to spur them on but to know when to hold them back," Bowker said.

"Debbie is still very young as distance runners go (many compete into their 30s) and that led to the disaster last year at the Commonwelath Games in Edmonton. Because of her own desire to do well, she put too much pressure on herself."

Debbie finished ninth at 3,000 metres and was eliminated in her heat of the 1,500, but she and Bowker learned from the experience. Debbie reassessed her goals, worrying less about winning medals and concentrating more on her individual improvement.

That doesn't mean she has given up the idea of winning internationally, but as Bowker says, by working on her own improvement, the medals will take care of themselves.

It may be a while before they come because most distance runners don't reach their full potential until their mid-20s, maintaining their peak for as much as 10 years.

But Bowker suspects Scott may hit the heights sooner than that.

"If she avoids injury or other pitfalls and is able to maintain her present training level (three hours a day) she should be able to step into any 3,000-metre race in the world and look good."

Although a top class runner at all distances, Bowker believes Scott will probably do better at 3,000 metres as she matures.

Debbie suffered a serious injury to her Achilles' tendon a year ago. It kept her from running for seven weeks but she maintained her fitness level in typical fashion.

"She thrashed herself in the pool every day," said Bowker.

"What she does she does with intensity, I'll tell you that," he added. "We've had our problems in terms of her intensity and my having to put the brakes on her."

In other words, Debbie wants to work harder than Bowker wants her to.

Every coach should be as fortunate.

All Signs Flash 'Go' For Cloverdale, Sandown

Jim Keeling Sr. of Cloverdale Raceways was the winner of the John J. Mooney award for outstanding contribution to Canadian Horse Racing early this year and, if he's not careful, he could be in the running again.

The award is presented annually by the National Association of Canadian Race Tracks and is named after the founding president of the association, John Mooney, who now is in charge of racing at Calgary's Stampede Park.

It was given to Keeling primarily for his vision in bringing harness racing to the West Coast (and Vancouver Island) and making a success out of a venture that previously had failed.

Under his guidance, the Cloverdale plant has enjoyed phenomenal success since he started operations there just over three years ago. The mutuel play just keeps going up. The present meeting is no exception. The handle is up again, just under 20 per cent over last year with the total on March 6 at $12,248,333, compared to $10,222,822 one year ago.

That averages out to a daily handle of $266,000 compared to $235,000 in 1978, and bringing with it the thought that the magic figure of $300,000 isn't that far away in the future.

That future is next fall and all new for Cloverdale and that's where Keeling comes in again. Construction of a new $2 million plant, seating 3,500 patrons and designed in such a way that further expansion will be possible, is awaiting only the end of the present season and ironing out of final details.

Or as Keeling said: "I'm ready, but the municipal design board hasn't told me what color I can paint the place yet." The new facilities should be ready for racing in the fall.

Before that, however, there is another summer at Sandown. That will begin on May 19 and continue for 65 racing days, ending on September 8, the provincial cabinet announced Friday.

Although it seemed to take longer than necessary for the decision on racing dates, Keeling wasn't sitting on his his hands insofar as Sandown is concerned. He's looking ahead there too. He has purchased Glamorgan Farm, which consists of 1.5 acres near Sandown, and has taken an option on other property in the area.

"We need the stall space," he explained. And he is quietly confident the standardbreds will receive better support from racing fans this time around than in the inaugural season of 1978 when it was more or less a novelty.

Why else would he be making such plans for the future?

There was increased interest near the finish of last-year's meeting and Keeling is hopeful it will have carried over to this season as it wouldn't take much of an improvement to hit an estimated break-even mark of about $110,000.

And, if people here ever learn to wager in the manner of the harness fan at Cloverdale, look out! Over there the two-dollar bet is all but out of style.

The exactor is the big play, as it was here, but the wagering is on a far grander style. The three-horse "box" is commonplace with four-horse combinations the rule with the high rollers. Toss in the odd five-horse perm and you get some idea of the action, particularly when it comes to the triactor. That's on the last race of the card and get-even time, if you can. It's an interesting ploy, with all sorts of possibilities, but whether it will be used here has not been determined.

At any rate the Sandown operation again will be handled by Jim Keeling Jr., who is operations manager at Cloverdale as well. Jim Sr. will be spending more time on the mainland overseeing construction of the new premises.

Incidentally, just to make sure that things in harness racing are on the up and up and stay that way, Jack Short of the B.C. Racing Commssion is in San Francisco this week at a panel on how to keep everybody honest in racing.

This is especially apropros to harness racing, where questions have been raised about peculiar driving habits in California this year.

"We just want to find out what is being done, what patterns to look for, and anything that we can do that will protect the patron and help keep the sport honest," said Short.

Turf Club May Cancel Fall Meet at Sandown

While operators of harness racing at Sandown Park are expecting bigger things for their second summer at Sandown Park, the men behind thoroughbred racing at the Sidney track may be ready to abandon plans for a 1979 season.

George Harknett, president of Capital City Turf Club, said there doesn't appear to be much hope for a thoroughbred meeting after learning of Sandown racing dates approved Friday by the provincial cabinet.

Thoroughbreds have been allotted 14 days of racing by a cabinet order, beginning Oct. 16 and finishing Nov. 13.

Standardbreds have been granted 65 days, starting May 19 and ending Sept. 8.

"We're very disappointed in the decision," Harknett said. "We had asked that the standardbred season be cut back to Aug. 1, and as we lost about $40,000 last year, there's not much chance of us running this year."

"Eighty days of racing, be it thoroughbred or standardbred, are too much for the Island," Harknett commented.

Holding a lease — that has six years remaining — on Sandown Park for a fall season, the Turf Club has held a meeting for the last four years. However, last fall was the first time thoroughbred operators were forced to follow a harness meet. Last year the standardbreds were in action from early June to early September.

Jim Keeling Jr., general manager of Cloverdale Raceways, was pleased by the announcement of 1979 dates for standardbreds.

"We'll operate on Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday each week at Sandown," Keeling said. "Our people will be moving over to the Island shortly after our current meet ends on April 7."

Friday's cabinet decision gave 116 days for the standardbreds at Cloverdale Raceways, from Oct. 15 to March 31, 1980.

Thoroughbred racing at Vancouver's Exhibition Park, operated by the B.C. Jockey Club, will consist of 108 racing days, on Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays, from April 9 until Oct. 13.

Button Match

Oak Bay's Jake Peters and George Bigelow, carrying over their control from last year, will make the first 1979 defence of the senior golf buttons Monday (11 a.m.) at Uplands against George Barnes and Cliff Sjoberg of Cedar Hill.

Inaugurated in 1956, the matches are for golfers of 55 years and over.

Panther Streak Broken

VANCOUVER — Parkland Panthers' coach Joe Milligan would have preferred to make things more interesting, but circumstances and the disciplined Richmond Colts wouldn't allow it.

As a result, Richmond and Burnaby South Rebels will square off tonight in the final for the British Columbia high school boys' basketball championship.

Parkland's loss ended Vancouver Island's hopes of a third successive provincial champion. Oak Bay captured the title in 1977 while Nanaimo Islanders emerged as the province's best last year.

Nanaimo was bounced from a final-day appearance by dropping a 69-60 consolation decision to Terrace.

Parkland has a chance to finish third. The Sidney school plays Gladstone tonight in the playoff for the position, but Milligan was disappointed with the 15-point loss.

Blame it, in part, on "circumstances."

First, there was an injury to guard Dexter Williams. One of the sparkplugs behind Parkland's offense, Williams suffered recurrence of a groin injury and had to be rested frequently in the semi-final.

Also hurting the Panthers were early foul problems. Forward John Ibbotson fouled out before game's end and high-scoring Quinn Groenhyde had to tread on egg-shells for most of the final half.

Averaging almost 30 points and the most-valuable player in the Island championships, Groenhyde's foul troubles took the sting out of Parkland's attack.

Panthers, down 15-13 after the first quarter, led 26-21 with about five minutes left in the half when the wall started to cave in on the Sidney team. Groenhyde took his third personal and Milligan had no choice but to replace him with Gord Fox. By the half, Colts were ahead 29-28.

Still, anybody's game.

Then the cruncher. With only 89 seconds played in the second half, Groenhyde was charged with foul No. 4. As soon as he sat down, Richmond went to work. Dominating the backboards, shooting well and sparked by guards Alan Tait (26 points) and Dan Dennis (18), the Colts pulled away steadily. At one point, by 20.

Six-foot-nine Greg Wiltjer scored a game-high 30 for Panthers, but it wasn't enough. Groenhyde managed only 12 while Williams scored four. Alan Benn was the only other Panther to get on the scoresheet with nine points.

The sharpshooting of Jim Kellar (23), Dave Metzmeier (18) and Harvey James (17) sparked Terrace to victory over Nanaimo, the Island's No. 2 team. Only Mike Murphy (18) and Terry Nohr (10) managed to get into double figures for the Islanders.

Terrace will play Prince George's Duchess Park for fifth place while the consolation final (for fourth place) will be between Magee Lions and Mennonite Eductational Institute Eagles. MEI beat West Vancouver Islanders 80-73 while Magee defeated Delta Pacers 76-67 in Friday's consolation semi-finals.

NANAIMO (60) — Mark Dorsay 2, Terry Nohr 10, Randy Marston 4, Jim Jordbro 6, Mike Murphy 18, Kurt Kelly 8, Dan Steffes 2, Dave Brown 2, Kevin Borsario 4, Ian Petterson 4.

Broncos, Breakers Add Extras to Tonight's Game

It was furthermost from their minds, but Victoria Cougars and New Westminster marked time in their struggle for second place in the Western Division and applied extra dressing to tonight's Western Hockey League meeting in Memorial Arena.

Both lost Friday outings.

The Cougars, plagued by defensive consistencies, were upset 6-3 by the Breakers in Seattle. Ernie McLean's Bruins remained three points behind Victoria with thanks, from the Cougars, to Lethbridge Broncos. The Broncos held off a late New Westminster rush to score a 7-6 victory.

In other games Friday, Billings Bighorns defeated Regina 7-3 in a game that dimmed Pats' playoff chances in the Eastern Division and Saskatoon Blades surprised Brandon Wheat Kings 7-6. It was only the fourth loss suffered by Brandon in 68 games this season.

Returning home, Victoria coach Jack Shupe sees tonight's game — the last of Cougars' regular-season confrontations with the Bruins — as one that may decide second place, "if we win."

After tonight, the Cougars finish up against Seattle (Tuesday), Portland Winter Hawks (Friday) and Medicine Hat Tigers (next Saturday). New Westminster, with a game in hand, must play Portland twice, Seattle and Medicine Hat.

Three unanswered goals in the second period made it easy for Seattle, defeating Victoria for only the second time in 15 games.

Shupe rested defenceman Todd Morton, who has been bothered by a pulled groin, and dressed three rookies called up from Nanaimo earlier in the week.

Erroll Rausse scored his 60th and 61st goals to spark Seattle while George Fritz, with two, and Mike Shields connected for the Cougars. Centre Gary Lupul drew an assist on Sheilds' goal, on a power play, and reached the 100-point mark in scoring.

In Saskatoon, and before a crowd of 4,112, Brandon may have lost more than a game. All-star defenceman Brad McCrimmon was helped from the ice with an apparent shoulder injury but the extact extent of the injury is not known.

Scottish Rink Sidelines Fish

Times News Services

Darren Fish's prediction that the United States would wind up in the final of the world junior mens' curling championships came true with an ironic twist in Moose Jaw Friday: Fish's Canadian rink will not be there to face the Americans.

The Fish rink of Edmonton, after finishing on top of the round-robin section with an eight-and-one record, lost 5-3 to Scotland's Andrew McQuistin in Friday's semi-final.

Meanwhile, Don Barkom's Grand Forks, N.D., rink defeated Norway's Sjur Loen 7-4 to pave the way for today's championship game.

It will be the first time since the world junior championships began five years ago that Canada and Sweden will not be playing for the title.

Norway and Canada played off for the bronze medal and third place.

Fish dropped behind two in the first end and although he blanked three ends and at one point tied the game, McQuistin threw a tough double takeout in the 10th end to kill Fish's two counters and win the game.

Fish takes his rink to Victoria this weekend for the Canadian junior championships that begin Monday (Also see story page 21).

Southern Ontario's Bob Brucker of Ottawa has the lead with nine wins and one loss going into the final round of the Canadian Police championships at Edmonton.

Brucker defeated Harvey Gregorash of Calgary 8-5 Friday, knocking Alberta down to a second-place tie with Manitoba at 8-2. Don Glintz of Winnipeg lost 8-7 to the Saskatchewan rink skipped by Norm Gilbertson of Saskatoon.

Gilbertson is third with seven wins and three losses, tied with Northern Ontario's Mike Fawcett of Englehart. Fawcett lost 8-3 to British Columbia's Dave Wilson of Dawson Creek. B.C. has a 4-6 record.

At Kenora, Ont., rinks from Saskatchewan, Alberta, Manitoba, and the Northwest Territories have won playoff berths at the 20th annual Elks curling championship.

B.C. finished with a 3-4 record.

Bays Collect Team Honors

Oak Bay, boosted by top teams in both the midget and junior girls' categories, has collected the aggregate title in the Greater Victoria junior high school cross-country league.

St. Michael's won midget boys' laurels and Central topped the junior boys' competition.

Austin Foursome Beaten In Playoff

LLOYDMINSTER, Alta. (CP) — Kevin Adams of Quebec won the Royal Canadian Legion national curling championhip Friday, defeating Dick Austin of Victoria 8-6 in a sudden-death playoff game.

The playoff was needed when the two rinks finished with 7-2 records after nine rounds of the round-robin competition.

Quebec earlier Friday beat Ontario 8-3 and British Columbia's champions defeated Nova Scotia 10-3.

Kratzert Again Avoids Bogies

MIAMI (AP) — Bill Kratzert said he had the confidence he could "hit it where I'm looking."

And as any golfer knows, that's the name of the game.

Kratzert put together a solid 69 in the blustery winds and grabbed the second-round lead Friday in the $250,000 Doral-Eastern Open. It was an almost-errorless effort. He hasn't made a bogey in the tournament and really only came close once in the second round.

He had a 36-hole total of 136, eight shots under par and a one-shot lead halfway through the chase for a $45,000 first prize.

Kratzert held a one-shot advantage over Alan Tapie, the first-round leader, who had a 71-137.

At 138 were Bill Rogers, Mark McCumber and Jack Renner. Rogers closed with a 68, including a string of four birdies in five holes. McCumber holed a 70-foot birdie putt on the last hole for a 71. Renner had the same score.

Bradley Leads

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Pat Bradley, who had four birdies in a six-hole span, fired a 5-under-par 67 on Friday to take sole possession of the lead midway through a $150,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.

Bradley's 67, coupled with a 71 in Thursday's opening round, gave her a 36-hole score of 138 over the 6,212-yard, par-72 Rancho Bernardo layout, and a 2-stroke advantage over first-round co-leader Vivian Brownlee.

Jocelyn Bourassa of Quebec made the cut at 149 with a total of 148, but Cathy Sherk of Ontario and Dale Shaw of Victoria were eliminated with totals of 150 and 153.

YOUSON, McNEIL BOWLERS OF WEEK

League-mates Sandy McNeil and George Youson captured the fivepin awards during the 21st week of competition in the 16th annual Victoria Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest.

Sandy nailed down women's laurels with a 189-251-386 — 826 series and George collected the men's honors with a 234-280-351 — 865 series in the Monday Classic League at Town and Country Lanes.

Final Rolloffs Start April 29

Dates have been decided for the Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs that follow the annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week competition.

Fivepinners will be first on the line in the pursuit of rolloff titles, cash and trophies. They will be blasting pins at Town and Country Lanes on Sunday, April 29, starting at 1 p.m.

Tenpinners will take their shots at rolloff glory one week later, hitting the boards at Mayfair Lanes on Sunday, May 6, also starting at 1 p.m.

At stake in the rolloffs will be a Bowler-of-the-Year crown in each of the contest's four divisions, a Times Trophy for the winner in each section and a $150 bonus award that will go to any rolloff champion who is a daily subscriber to the Victoria Times.

Eligible to compete will be all winners of weekly awards in the 26-week, 16th annual Bowler-of-the-Week event. As in the weekly contests, the rolloffs will be decided on scratch scores in three-game series with regular contest rules in effect.

Bowlers started today on the [illegible] week of this season's contest, bidding for honors in four divisions — women's and men's fivepins, and women's and men's tenpins — in league play on southern Vancouver Island lanes.

Following a trend of former seasons, some of the slickest pin-spillers are now racing against time in attempts to roll big scores at the right times to earn Bowler-of-the-Week awards.

And with just four weeks remaining, don't be surprised if several of the big gunners are suddenly somewhat more determined than usual in their shots at qualifying to join rolloff scrambles for trophies and bonus awards.

Fraser Ignites Outburst To End Slide by Canucks

DENVER (AP) — Vancouver coach Harry Neale said he wasn't sure if his team would ever win another game.

But Friday night the Canucks broke a seven-game losing streak by handing Colorado Rockies a 4-1 loss in the only National Hockey League game.

"This was a big one for us. We had lost seven in a row coming in and won just one of the last 15. I was beginning to think we'd never win a game," Neale said. "Colorado is one of the few teams we think we have a chance of beating if we play well. They miss (Colorado defenceman Barry) Beck in the worst way," he added.

The victory firmed up Vancouver's hold on second place in the Smythe Division, boosting the Canucks six points ahead of St. Louis.

The Canucks broke open a 1-1 tie midway through the second period when Curt Fraser scored at 7:02 and Ron Tudor added another goal 63 seconds later.

The two quick tallies seemed to demoralize the Rockies and Canuck goalie Dunc Wilson held them scoreless the rest of the way.

Captain Don Lever opened scoring for Canucks but Trevor Johansen, playing his first game as a Rockie, tied it before the first period ended. Defenceman Harold Snepsts added Vancouver's final goal into an open net in the final minute of play.

Canadian Skaters Have to Apply 'Pizzaz'

VIENNA (CP) — The Soviet Union collected more gold while disappointment dogged the Canadian team at the world figure skating championships Friday.

Natalia Linichuk and Gennadi Karponosov successfully defended their dance title, giving the Soviet Union its second gold medal of the week after Vladimir Kovalev had won the men's singles crown.

Tai Babilonia and Randy Gardner had earlier given the United States its first gold medal in the pairs competition and Linda Fratianne of the U.S. could collect a second gold medal in tonight's women's final.

Canadians had come here with no realistic hopes for medals but had counted on at least improving on their 1978 placings. The last hopes for any such movement were dashed Friday when Lorna Wighton and John Dowding finished sixth in the dance, the same ranking they had last year.

Linichuk and Karponosov had a strong lead going into Friday night's dance final and had little trouble winning their second title with a free skating performance that won them top marks.

Overall, they were placed first by all nine judges. The Hungarian couple of Krisztina Regoeczy and Andras Sallay placed second while 1977 champions Irina Moiseeva and Andrei Minenkov of the Soviet Union settled for the bronze medal.

It was the Soviet Union's ninth straight dance championship.

The championships wind up tonight with the women's free skating final where defending champion Anett Poetzsch of East Germany carries only a slim lead over Fratianne, who lost the title to Poetzsch last year. West Germany's Dagmar Lurz holds down third spot.

Janet Morrissey of Ottawa, skating in her first world championship, dropped to 18th spot despite performing a strong short program Friday afternoon.

At least some of the Canadians took a lesson from Friday's performances by the top Soviet and Hungarian teams who displayed free dance programs filled with razzle-dazzle that seemed to depart more and more from the traditional style of ice dancing.

"Canadians have always been conservative in this respect," said Michael de la Penotiere of Toronto, who along with partner Patricia Fletcher, finished 15th with a traditional program. They were 12th last year.

De La Penotiere said he and Patricia realize that their program requires major changes to include some of the trends displayed by the Europeans.

"After two years at the world championships we know that we can skate now but we know we need a lot more pizzaz to gain the judges attention."

CANADIAN JUNIOR CURLING STARTS HERE MONDAY

They Keep It Interesting

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

Things should be interesting in the Canadian junior men's curling championship opening at the Victoria Curling Club Monday for one simply obvious reason.

The competition promises to be excellent.

For in addition to defending-champion Darren Fish of Alberta, who seems to make news every time he steps on the ice, there are some other foursomes that should bear watching.

Runner-up last year, skip Peter "Jeep" Jenkins is in his third Canadian playdown. Billy Dillon is the third, John Likely, second, and Richard Kays, lead, and all have experience in playdowns and Canada Games competition.

Manitoba might be said to be "loaded." Skip Merton Thompsett won the the 1978 schoolboys, was runner-up in the '77 schoolboys, and competed in the Manitoba provincials in 1978 where he had a 1-2 record.

Third Lyle Derry is a '78 provincial winner, a 1979 provincial winter games champion and was in the 1978 Canadian where he compiled a 7-4 mark.

Second Joel Gagne has similar credentials — a competitor in the '78 provincials and a member of the winning rink in the '78 schoolboys, and runner-up in '77. Lead Mike Friesen has also been to the provincials and is a schoolboys' winner and runner-up.

The Quebec rink is an experienced group with a record to match. Under the heading of previous major achievement is the note that the foursome, skipped by Denis Marchand, has won 48 out of 50 games this year.

Three members of the rink — Marchand, third Denis Cecil and second (deuxieme) Yves Barrette — have been together for two years. Marc Denis is the lead and newcomer.

The Ontario team from Brantford has had a taste of top competition as well.

Skip Nicholas Rizzo, second Brad Hager and lead Chris Hager played in the Ontario men's finals in 1978 and finished with a 2-5 record. Rizzo also won four Banana Belt District titles while third "Atch" Aichison made it to the Ontario tankard finals in 1977 and was on the winning Banana Belt rink. The team has been together for two years.

B.C. representaives Stacey Coomber, Dan Carriere, Don McPhee and Mike Cameron may be in deep because of lack of experience, but their record doesn't indicate they'll scare easily. They have a 25-1 mark for the season and were unbeaten in the playoffs.

Fish has two of his last year's championship rink with him again. They are second Murray Ursuliak and lead Barry Barker. The newomer is third Wes Johnson. Only Ursuliak was with Fish in the World Junior at Moose Jaw this week. While their curling talents are already known, their hobbies are interesting, too.

Fish does radio promotion work and is interested in horse racing. Johnson's hobby is skiing, Uruslak admits to enjoying gambling, while Barker, the 18-year-old who was bounced from the World team, is simply a curler. Sitting out at Moose Jaw drove him up the wall.

So those are some of the teams. They and the others will be on view next week along with all the unkown factors that make up a tournament.

But, speaking of hobbies, the curlers list is varied. Most like some type of sport. Others lean to reading, camping, music.

Otherwise, the most common likes seem to be skiing (de fond and alpin), hockey, golf and . . girls!

Ah, youth!

Opening ceremonies are Monday at 2 p.m. First draw at 2:30 p.m.

come aboard

Come get a taste of the sea, without getting your feet wet.

Visit one of the Marine Trades Association member dealers listed below and get all the poop on boating. Before the boating season starts.

Take the wheel, man the lifeboats, study the charts, play with the controls, learn the ropes, and above all, ask lots of questions.

That way, if and when you decide to buy your own boat, you won't feel all at sea.

And that makes the good boating life even better.

So take the time to talk to an expert, your local marine dealer.

Come aboard for Good Times '79.

Mormon apostle speaking here

The Victoria B.C. Stake of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormons) will hold its annual conference this weekend with one of the general authorities of the church present.

The Victoria Stake (much like a diocese) has a membership of more than 2,500 people and is one of more than 1,000 stakes worldwide encompassing some 4 million people.

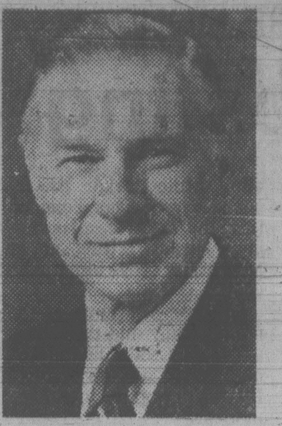
For the second time in four years the presiding authority at the conference will be one of the 12 apostles of the church.

Elder James Faust, born in Delta, Utah, moved to the Salt Lake Valley at an early age. Faust lettered in both track and football at high school and ran the quarter-mile and the mile relay while attending the University of Utah.

He served a mission for the church from 1939-42 in Brazil and following the mission was an intelligence officer in the Second World War. It was during this time, in 1943, that he married his wife, Ruth Wright, in the Salt Lake Temple. They have three sons and two daughters.

In 1948 Elder Faust received a law degree from the University of Utah and was later was elected to the State Legislature. In 1962 he was elected to the Utah Bar Association.

Faust has worked in numerous positions and has written and edited many magazines for the church. He was called and sustained as a member of the Council of Twelve in September, 1978.



Elder Faust

The public is welcome to attend a general session at 10 a.m. Sunday at the LDS Chapel, 2990 Quadra.

Perspectives

By Rev. J. A. Davidson

Many people today dismiss the biblical notion of sin as simply so much old-fashioned piety which degrades human nature in a most unrealistic way. A bright young man once told me that he thought the prayers of confession in church services are really quite unwholesome and probably damaging to the mental health of the worshippers if they take them seriously. A rather prevalent attitude is expressed in a limerick:

"There was a young girl from a mission
Who was seized by a dreadful suspicion
That Original Sin
Doesn't matter a pin
In this era of nuclear fission."

Some Christian teaching about sin has been indeed morbid and extravagant and fanciful. This seems generally to have come from holding that the Garden of Eden story is a statement of historical fact, an account of the origin of sin in the misconduct of Adam and Eve. But the significance of the biblical notion of sin is not dependent on taking that literalistic approach, on taking as historical fact a creative myth which, so to speak, x-rays the human heart.

The biblical notion of sin is essentially in the putting of self at the centre of all things and shoving other persons, and God, to the far edges of concern. It is a matter of what the psychiatrist Carl Jung called a person's own "godalmightiness." Sin is in self-concern, self-aggrandizement, self-worship.

Sin, of course, is not the whole story about our human nature, but it is a persisting element in our motivations. The biblical notion is a realistic assessment of our nature, and it is also an assertion of our human dignity, of the inner freedom which makes a person truly a person.

Sir Julian Huxley, an eminent scientist and a high priest of modern agnostic humanism, said in one of his books that in the biblical notion of sin there are "profundities and subtleties which are still capable of showing up the inadequacy of some of today's cruder so-called scientific approaches." The great historian Arnold Toynbee said, "In order to salvage civilization, each of us has to wrestle with the original sin in himself, and to be doing this perpetually, at every moment of his life." Sir Fred Clarke, an English educationalist, said this in a book on freedom and education: "Of all the needs of democracy, some abiding sense of the reality of Original Sin may yet prove to be the greatest." I quote these three thinkers—none of whom is a religious apologist—to make the point that the notion of sin is not just something championed by the morbidly pious.

Edward Hyams, an English writer, expressed something of the significance of the notion of sin when he said this of a character in his novel Not in Our Stars: "He had no sense of sin . . . only of misdemeanor. The sublime and sole distinction of adult man is a sense of sin: between him and the jungle there is nothing else."

Irish again!

TORONTO (CP) — More than 500 persons are expected to attend the first St. Patrick's Day Mass since the Second World War at St. Cecilia's Roman Catholic Church, an 88-year-old, west-end church that dropped the traditional Irish celebration when the parish became less Irish.

Updated 'Hungry' Mar. 29

An updated World Vision television special, "I'm Hungry" will be seen March 29 on CHEK TV from 7 to 11 p.m.

Trudy Sweatman, special representative, reports that since the TV program Escape to Nowhere about the 'boat people' was aired, people have beem responding to the need and expressing appreciation of the way World Vision handles the finances and gets the job done.

During the past weekend, associates and friends of World Vision participated in the S.O.S. program (Planned Fast). Friday evening, a film called The Hurting Ones was shown, helping participants to have empathy with hungry people in Bangladesh.

Another young adult group, Koinonia, from Oak Bay United Church are fasting today and Sunday. They will meet Sunday for fellowship, sharing poems, readings and prayers relating to world hunger. The fast will be broken at a "hunger banquet" at which time they will share in a "poor man's meal" of rice and a lentils dish from Nepal called Dehal Bad. Each will then give an offering to the work of World Vision.

Healing centre talk set

CHURCH CHRONICLES

Guest preacher Sunday at St. John's Anglican Church, 1611 Quadra will be Venerable Geoffrey Flagg, Archdeacon of Nanaimo, who recently spent three months on the staff of Green Pastures Healing Centre in Bournemouth, England.

Flagg will speak at both the 9:30 and 11 a.m. services of the people who come to Green Pastures and of the healing they discover as they live for one or two weeks in an atmosphere of Christ's love, peace and joy.

The public is invited to bring a brown-bag lunch and view slides of Green Pastures following the morning service. Tea and coffee will be served in the crypt and the slides will begin at 12:45.

Victoria Canadian Girls in Training will celebrate the Year of the Child by holding a talent night Sunday at 7 p.m. at Oak Bay United Church hall, Granite Street.

A youth choir, skits, singers, and musical numbers will be featured. Admission $1 or $3 for families.

The 100-member Men's and Women's Choruses of the Ogden Latter-day Saints Institute of Religion will perform Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the cultural hall of the Mormon Church, 2990 Quadra.

Doors open at 6:45 p.m. A donation will be sought to help defray expenses.

Doreen and Roy Hodges will show slides of their work in Nigeria at 7:30 p.m. Sunday in St. John the Baptist Anglican church hall, Glencairn Road in Colwood. Missionaries from Central Baptist Church, the Hodges have served in Nigeria for more than 20 years with the Sudan Interior Mission, and are here on furlough.

The Ladies' Club of the Victoria Truth Centre, 1201 Fort, will hold a spring tea and sale from 2:30-4 p.m. Thursday, March 22.

Jim Antoine, former CBC announcer and chief of the Fort Simpson Indian band, will speak on Land and the values of native people at the Noon Forum series Values in Human Struggles at 12:10 p.m. Wednesday in St. John's Church, Quadra Street near Pandora. Coffee and tea served from 11:30 a.m., bring own bag lunch. Session consists of 20-minute address and 20-minute question and answer period. Free parking behind the church.

Shiokari Pass, the newest film from the producers of The Hiding Place, will be shown at Parkdale Evangelical Free Church, corner of Tolmie and Jackson, on Sunday at 6 p.m.

A true story, Shiokari Pass is based on the international best-seller by Ayaro Muira—a story of the abiding love of a young couple at the turn of the century. The public is welcome.

The Brahms Horn Trio, three talented local musicians in Barbara Stephen, Randall Weiss and Madeleine Wheeler, will participate in the eucharist service at St. Saviour's Anglican Church Sunday, at 10 a.m.

Inviting local artists to participate in the setting of the traditional Anglican liturgy was initiated last month by Rev. Walter Donald who is looking for painters, sculptors and photographers who would like to display their works in the large church hall available for this purpose following the 10 a.m. service.

The 9:15 a.m. service at Emmanuel Baptist Church Sunday will be recorded for television by CBC as part of a documentary to be run at 11 a.m. the following Sunday on the church's activities.

The service will be conducted by Pastor Norm Archer, who recently returned from a six-week missionary visit to India. Other activities of the church, including the storefront Mustard Seed mission to street people in downtown Victoria, will be featured in the TV program.

J. Oswald Sanders of Auckland, New Zealand, internationally known Bible teacher, conference speaker and author, will talk about world conditions when he speaks at Central Baptist Church, 833 Pandora, on Monday at 7:30 p.m. Sanders, best known as general director of the Overseas Missionary Fellowship from 1954 to 1969, will appear under the auspices of that organization. His more than 30 books have been translated into many languages.

The Bethel Fellowship Baptist Church, 2269 Mills Road, Sidney dedicates its new church building to the service of the Lord on Sunday at 2:45 p.m. Dedicatory prayer will be delivered by Pastor Darrell Eddy. Dedicatory sermon will be by Pastor Robert Holmes of Central Baptist.

Churches back rights efforts

Christian people attending meetings all across Canada this week as part of the Northern Native Rights Campaign will be invited to sign a declaration of their willingness to join in a partnership with native people and other Canadians in personal and collective action for the struggle for justice and stewardship.

The campaign commenced in the Railway Committee Room of the House of Commons last Thursday, where northern native organizations presented statements regarding aboriginal rights, revision of the Indian Act, self-determination and major resource development proposals including the Alaska Highway natural gas pipeline.

Victoria Bishop Remi De Roo, a member of the Social Action Commission of the Canadian Conference of Catholic Bishops, was among those present. The presence of church leaders at this meeting speaks of the solidarity of the churches with the right of native people to be heard and present their case.

Bishop Roy Gartrell of the Anglican Diocese of B.C., Mrs. Jara Smith, president of the Victoria Presbytery of the United Church, and Rev. John Watson, president of the Victoria Council of Churches, are among the local church leaders who have signed the declaration, which reads:

IN VIEW OF the repeated calls of the Native People of Canada for recognition of their aboriginal rights and;

IN VIEW OF the fact that these aboriginal rights constitute fundamental moral and ethical issues concerning the future of this country and;

IN VIEW OF the fact that our churches have taken a strong public position in support of the struggles of Northern native people for the recognition of these rights and;

IN VIEW OF the fact that injustices to one group within society dehumanizes all persons in society;

The time has come for us as Christians in Canada to join together in a call for justice today for our children tomorrow

BY AFFIRMING the necessity of a new covenant between native people and other Canadians;

BY DECLARING our responsibility for stewardship of creation;

BY COMMITTING ourselves to personal and public witness;

BY ACTING in solidarity with native people in our common struggle for justice and responsible stewardship.

A number of events for the campaign are scheduled this coming week in Victoria, Chemainus, Comox, Courtenay, Port Alberni and Salt Spring Island.

At 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, March 20, there will be a public event in St. John's Church Hall, 1611 Quadra (entrance off Balmoral Street). Featured will be Dene Nation, a film by Father Rene Fumoleau in co-operation with the Dene of the Mackenzie Valley.

Northern native people attending this meeting include Betty Menicoche and Jim Antoine of the Dene, Dayle McDonald of the Council for Yukon Indians and four members of the Nishga Tribal Council of Northwestern B.C. The public is invited. Copies of the declaration will be available at this meeting and at other events.

On Sunday, members of the Nishga Tribal Council will speak in St. John the Baptist Church in Colwood, St. Philip's Church in Oak Bay and St. Mary's Church in Saanichton.

On Wednesday, March 21, Jim Antoine of the Dene Nation will speak at the noon-hour lenten forum in St. John's Anglican Church, 1611 Quadra, on a new relationship between native people and other Canadians.

Crusader here

Canada's own Billy Graham, Edmonton evangelist Max Solbrekken has been holding a crusade at Esquimalt United Church, 500 Admirals, this week, culminating in a rally at 7:30 p.m. today. Solbrekken's TV program is seen on KVOS TV channel 12 at 1 p.m. Sundays. The charismatic preacher, whose primary aim is to bring people back to Jesus, has also been credited with healing powers.

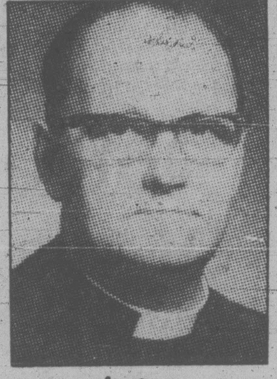
Ex-pastor guest at St. Aidan's

St. Aidan's United Church, Mt. Tolmie, will welcome former pastor Rev. Ibbs Avery, to the pulpit at both the 9:30 a.m. and 11 a.m. services Sunday. A reception and coffee hour will be held starting at noon.

Avery will be guest preacher at St. Aidan's after an absence of almost 20 years and it is hoped many old-timers will be able to attend the services and welcome Rev. and Mrs. Avery.

It was during the Avery ministry that the present St. Aidan's church was erected and dedicated June 17, 1960, with a seating capacity of 700. At that time Avery was chairman of the Victoria Presbytery of the United Church of Canada.

The new church replaced the original structure erected in 1894 as St. Aidan's Presbyterian Church, and the congregation has a history going back to 1873.



Avery

In the summer of 1958, the Avery family exchanged pulpits with a black Los Angeles minister, Rev. Dr. Nelson Higgins. In Los Angeles, Avery conducted services for an all-black congregation.

Following St. Aidan's ministry, Rev. Avery took charge at Knox United Church in Prince George, where he carried on a team ministry with Rev. N.C. Steacy which included business and pub visitations.

The next 10 years found the Avery family at St. John's United Church at Pointe Claire, Quebec. During this time Rev. Avery led 12 pilgrimages to the Holy Land. In 1975 he moved to City View United Church in Ottawa, where he is now ministering.

His sermon topic Sunday is The Joy of Our Christian Life (Romans 14: 5-17).

Adventists receive new leader

Pastor Glen Maxson will become president of the B.C. Conference of Seventh-day Adventists April 1.

He comes from Oshawa, where he served as stewardship secretary to the Adventist Canadian Union Conference.

The Maxsons came to Canada from Chile in 1977, where Pastor Maxson served as president of the Chilean Union. Previously he served as president of the Central American Union and leader of several local conferences and also as departmental director in the Inter-American Division and several union conferences.

Maxson's parents served in the South American division, where he was born. He is married and has three children, one of them an ordained minister.

H-Bomb In The Book

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — An Illinois physicist who read the hydrogen bomb article the government is trying to prevent from being published says a diagram in the Encyclopedia Americana would give a competent physicist the same information.

The government has asked for a permanent injunction to ban a Progressive magazine article by freelance writer Howard Morland, claiming it contains top secret information that could help other nations develop hydrogen bombs.

Progressive magazine, a 40,000-circulation independent monthly published in Madison, is under a 10-day restraining order issued by U.S. District Judge Robert W. Warren preventing it from publishing or talking about the article.

Morland, who has been in hiding since the federal suit was filed, made his first public statement about the case Friday.

"Every word and every diagram in the article I have written entitled The H-Bomb Secret is information the American people have a need to know and a right to know," Morland said in a handwritten statement.

Vietnam Digs In on Border

BANGKOK (AP) — Vietnam reported tens of thousands of its soldiers and civilians were building a defence line along areas of the border with China today.

At the United Nations, the Soviet Union vetoed a resolution aimed at ending Indochina aggression.

China said Friday that its forces have withdrawn from Vietnam, but indicated some of its troops may still be inside some border areas claimed by both sides. Vietnam did not mention either continued fighting or Chinese troops inside Vietnam today, the staples of its official media reports since China invaded Feb. 17.

But a Voice of Vietnam broadcast said ethnic minority groups and regional forces in the frontier province of Lang Son are digging trenches, fortifications and preparing communication links between key defensive positions.

It said tens of thousands of people are working on hills and high ground to prepare a defensive line against Chinese aggression.

Lang Son province was the site of probably the heaviest fighting in the war, and is considered the gateway and invasion route from China to Vietnam.

Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua told a news conference in Peking that China's entire frontier force was back in China Friday. He noted that a boundary disagreement exists between the two countries but said the disputed area "involves only dozens of square kilometers of land."

Vietnam earlier accused China of moving boundary markers deep into its territory and has said it was ready to negotiate with China one week after all Chinese troops had pulled out of its territory.

At the same time, China has been urging Vietnam to withdraw from Cambodia, which it invaded Dec. 25 to set up a pro-Hanoi Cambodian Communist government. But forces loyal to ousted premier Pol Pot, China's ally, have been waging guerrilla war ever since.

The Soviet Union, which backs Vietnam, killed a draft resolution in the UN Security Council on Friday that appealed to both China and Vietnam to cease hostilities and withdraw their invasion forces. It was the second Soviet veto on such a measure in two months.

Soviet Ambassador Oleg Troyanovsky said he voted against the latest draft because it "virtually linked" China's invasion of Vietnam to the fighting in Cambodia. "It amounts to putting Chinese aggression on the same footing with the victim," he said.

Thirteen of the 15 council members, including the United States and China, voted for the latest proposal sponsored by five Southeast Asian countries. Czechoslovakia joined the Russians in voting against it.

However, only the five permanent Council members — Russia, the United States, France, Britain and China — have the veto power, so the Soviet no vote was the one that killed the measure.

Judgment Reserved On Bhutto's Petition

RAWALPINDI (Reuter) — The Pakistan Supreme Court reserved judgment today on a petition from condemned former prime minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto asking it to reverse its decision to send him to the gallows for a political killing.

The court said it will need at least three or four days to prepare its ruling. If the petition is rejected Bhutto, 51, could be executed seven days later.

Bhutto was convicted of ordering the slaying of a political opponent when he was in office in 1974.

Last month the Supreme Court rejected Bhutto's appeal against the death sentence.

The defence believes there is little chance of the court acquitting Bhutto, but holds out a slight hope that the sentence will be reduced to life imprisonment.

Botha Orders Probe Of His Own Ministers

JOHANNESBURG (WP) — In an implicit recognition that South Africa's worst political scandal may yet touch some officials of his administration, Prime Minister Pieter W. Botha has ordered government-appointed probers to investigate whether any minister in his cabinet knew of a covert newspaper-funding scheme or of any other "irregularity" in the former department of information.

Botha also announced Friday in Parliament that legal authorities have issued a warrant for the arrest of Eschel Rhoodie, former information secretary, on charges of fraud and theft arising from his handling of the secret projects in his department. Rhoodie is now in self-imposed exile, presumably somewhere in Europe.

The prime minister appears to have acted in response to growing public skepticism surrounding government claims that it is not covering up the extent of the political scandal that already has involved financial abuses running into the millions of dollars.

Fears of a cover-up have intensified over the past week, as the opposition press has daily printed allegations by Rhoodie, among them that at least six cabinet ministers knew of one or more secret projects he was running — a fact they all have denied up to now.

The scandal is taking on increasing importance in South African white politics — which have been dominated for the past 30 years by the ruling National Party. Public confidence in the government is low, and the white minority party's most important asset, its unity, has been shattered.

For Hotel Bargains Try Portugal

By EVELYN KIERAN

Despite the fluctuating dollar, there are still luxury hotel rooms available for less than $25. (Portugal has a chain of pousadas, modernized castles, convents and keeps, which are among the very best buys in Europe.)

You can still get a meal in a first class restaurant for as little as $3, including either beer or a carafe of local wine. Trains, buses and local taxis are cheap, both in the cities and out among the villages.

For a few pennies for a glass of coffee, you can have a ringside seat in a cafe on the Avenida da Liberdade, to view the strolling players in the life of Lisbon. You can even view it free from the benches in the many parks, gardens and squares that abound in this fabled city.

You could easily spend your whole holiday in Lisbon and not grow weary of it. For Lisbon is a walking town and a talking town. People are friendly to North Americans. Welcome. Comprimentos, they say.

Climb the hills to the Alfama, the ancient Moorish quarter. (Lisbon was a Phoenician port long before Christ.) You can sit among the ruins at the Castelo da St. Jorge, and look over the city, its maze of bright orange-tiled rooftops, pastel colored houses, crazy wash lines and street vendors peddling everything from wild strawberries to fresh fish or straw hats and sunglasses.

It's not hard to imagine the ancient days when Lisbon was the center of trade, first between Europe and Africa and later Asia and America as well. The Portuguese, under Prince Henry, were the outstanding navigators of the Western world and sailed their ships to many hitherto undiscovered ports.

Gold and diamonds from Brazil, slaves and ivory from Africa, Eastern spices, silks, rubies, pearls, porcelain; the strange, the new, the rich and exotic products of far away places flowed through the city like a river of gold, making her one of the great commercial meccas of the world. Something of all of this is still to be found in the streets of Lisbon.

There are fascinating museums like the Coach Museum and the Gulbenkian Collection. There's a lively zoo and acres of fragrant botanical gardens. But most of all, there are the streets themselves. The city was built, like ancient Rome, on seven hills. There is even an elevator to get to the top of one of them. Narrow streets wind around and lace them together.

As you walk, you see workmen handcrafting fine leather, women stitching beautiful embroideries, carpenters restoring antiques (try Rua Dom Pedro V for some rare originals and fine reproductions) and metal workers twisting gold and silver into jewelry patterned after ancient Arabesque filigrees.

When you stop for a coffee or a cool glass of delicious Portuguese wine, look for the "bilherte," the man who sells lottery tickets. This may be your lucky day.

If you feel really lucky, wander on up to Estoril — there's a "little engine that could" kind of train that wanders all along the waterfront — and take a turn at the tables in the new casino there. You may even win your entire holiday.

Then take a local bus down to the sea at Cascais, a colorful fishing village, and watch the men bring in their wildly-painted boats and set up the daily fish auction.

Reims Is the Heart of the Champagne Trail

By NEIL MORGAN

REIMS, FRANCE — Errant wisps of fog rose from the Seine as we drove past the Ile-St. Louis on a quiet Sunday morning in Paris. It was too early for traffic jams. A bluish wintry sun bathed the bridges of the Seine. It was the kind of moment when a reporter must be wary; nothing unpleasant seems possible on a day that begins so gently.

Out into the Marne we drove, on a toll road nearly deserted, through empty fields and vacant, grassy sites of towns pummeled to the ground by the cannon of World War 1. This is the land of which Carl Sandburg wrote: "I am the grass that covers the dead, here in the fields of Marne."

By the time we reached Reims, a rebuilt city whose plainness is exaggerated by the majesty of its cathedral, the locals were spilling out of churches. Pick-up soccer games were getting under way. Other tourists milled about in the great square in front of the cathedral.

To drive about Reims is a bleak reminder. Only 60 houses remained after the First World War, and only 15 of these were habitable. The cathedral, built slowly through the centuries by multitudes of workers, was destroyed.

The rebuilding of the cathedral, parts of which dated to the year 1211, got under way in the 1920s; it has been achieved with the help of kings and heads of state and Rockefellers. Marc Chagall windows replace some of the more traditional ones of history, but the great rose window has been restored over the massive entryway, and Reims is again, one of the classic examples of the Gothic style.

Salvaged fragments of cathedral sculptures and relics from the crowning of King Charles X are found nearby in the former residence of the archbishop, the Palais du Tau. A coronation museum displays dazzling reliquaries; here it is easy to sense the French grandeur of old.

Reims is as well known, in most of the world, for its champagne. The head offices of the leading champagne firms are found here, for this is the heart of the Champagne Trail, less than 100 miles east of Paris.

Each year visitors drive over the rolling hills around Reims and nearby Epernay, through gracious French villages and lush vineyards, following one of the three routes: the Blue, the Red, or the Green.

No matter which route one chooses, there is sure to be tramping through the cool, chalky underground cellars where champagne is painstakingly produced, far below the chalky soil that makes this part of France unique in the production of champagne.

About 180 million bottles of champagne are produced now each year, we learned, as suave Arnaud de Mareuil led us through the cellars of Ruinart Pere and Fils, which this year observes the 250th anniversary of production of champagne.

Only 3 per cent of those bottles go to the United States, and de Mareuil suggested, with a shrug, that it might be because Americans, almost alone in the world, seem to insist on drinking champagne from saucer-shaped glasses instead of tulip-shaped glasses that preserve its beauty and its effervesence.

More than half of France's champagne stays within France. Italy has risen to second place. Britain and Germany are closely matched for third place in champagne consumption.

Even though the French firm of Moet and Chandon is involved now in the production of what it considers champagne in California's Napa Valley, a casual Sunday tasting in the cellars of Reims and Epernay reinforces what the French insist: Champagne comes only from Champagne.

And it will continue to, for several hundred million bottles lie waiting the proper moment for market in the 120 miles of chalk cellars here.

As the hazy winter sun grew thin, de Mareuil led us into the Benedictine abbey of St. Pierre de Hautvillers, founded in 650.

Candles lit the dark nave enough for us to read the gravestone of Dom Perignon, who was cellarmaster of the monastery for many years before his death here in 1715 at the age of 77.

"He likes zee wine very much, you zee," de Mareuil explained, "and he put away a few bottles in his room. So one day here all the monks are in zee middle of zee mass, and zere is a POP, POP, POP. What is happening? Zere is no war, and zee chief of abbey leads everyone to zee sound, which is in zee room of Dom Perignon, and zay find zee bottles of wine he has hidden zere.

Zee chief of zee abbey says he must be punished, and so for punishment he is assigned to learn why all zese bottles have burst. Dom Perignon goes to work and learns after zee first fermentation of zee wine, because zee winter was cold and frost arrived quickly, all zee sugar was transformed, and in zee spring came zee second fermentation, causing zee bottles to burst.

"He had found zee secret of champagne." The year was 1668.

De Mareuil them led us outside where amber floodlights played on a life-size statue of Dom Perignon. We paid out respects and retreated from the growing cold to a Sunday supper of foie gras and champagne. It was easy to imagine why General Eisenhower set up headquarters Second World War at Reims, and why he took the German surrender in a schoolhouse near here in 1945. Life goes on.

DOM PERIGNON

BLITHE SPIRITS—The statue of Dom Perignon, the inventor of champagne, stands in the abbey of St. Pierre de Nautvillers among rolling hills of the French Marne.

CALIFORNIA ADVENTURE
April 19 to May 2 (14 days) Double $465 ea. Twin $480 ea.
A leisurely tour of Southern California, taking the lovely coast route from San Francisco to Mexico. This has been one our most popular tours for many years. The reasons will be obvious as we make our way over a series of extremely scenic roadways, stopping along the way to enjoy sea otters frolicking in the surf, ocean views defying description, and the many varieties of local plants expected to be in full bloom at this most pleasant time of year. To add to the enjoyment and complete discovery of this golden State, we spend two nights in 'Frisco with a comprehensive tour included; two nights in San Diego with admissions to Sea World and San Diego Zoo included; two nights in Aneheim with a tour package to Disneyland included and, to top off this list of valuable inclusions, you are invited as our guest to dine aboard the S.S. Princess Louise (ex C.P.R.) berthed near the "LOVE BOAT" in L. A. Harbour. Along the way we visit such popular locations as Carmel, Monterey and Fisherman's Wharf, Pacific Grove, Cannery Row, Santa Barbara, Laguna and many more locations you may have heard or read about. Join us won't you, there are only a few seats remaining.

Hikers' Paradise

PALM SPRINGS — Three teenagers and their canine companion explore the desert on a hike just minutes from Palm Spring, Calif. The desert resort town has become increasingly popular with families because it affords many activities for children of all ages.

The Mt. San Jacinto State Wilderness and State Park is at the 8,516-foot level of the Palm Springs Aerial Tramway, which transports visitors from the desert floor to a nature lover's paradise.

Designated a wilderness area in 1964, the 14,000-acre park is under the jurisdiction of the California State Park Rangers. A permanent ranger station is maintained in Long Valley, only a short one-half mile walk from the Tramway's Mountain Lodge.

There are some 54 miles of hiking trails ranging from the easier flat-ground nature trail to the demanding and inspiring trek to the 10,804-foot summit of San Jacinto. The park also boasts of some five primitive campgrounds.

Fantasy World Based on Dickens

LONDON (Reuter) — An American businessman plans to turn an old exhibition hall in north London into a fantasy world based on author Charles Dickens.

The idea, aimed to match Buckingham Palace and the Tower of London as a tourist attraction, comes from Los Angeles businessman Romm Doulton, who said his organization is prepared to spend £12.5 million ($30 million) transforming the 4.5-acre hall.

"We want to create an American-style theme park providing a three-dimensional experience where people are not just spectators but participate as well," Doulton said.

He added there is a great foreign interest in Dickens and he envisages recreating street scenes and Victorian dramas based on the author's stories.

The Royal Agricultural Hall, built in 1862, is owned by Islington local council, which will consider Doulton's proposal next month.

"In London You Must Stay at Lady Hartley's"

By DAVID BUTWIN

FULHAM, ENGLAND — My problem was this: I wanted to stay near friends in Fulham, on the fringes of London. Now, trendy Fulham has a lot going for it — boutiques, flower shops, tandoori restaurants — but hotels are a distinct rarity.

"You must stay at Lady Hartley's," said the man from the British Tourist Authority (BTA) as we walked up St. James Street one morning. He said the lady in question runs "London's most elegant Bed and Breakfast" — or so her printed yellow leaflet claims.

All kinds of questions tumbled forth. What is a B and B, that mainstay of Earl's Court, Paddington, and Kensington, doing in far-out Fulham? What, indeed, is a Lady Hartley doing in Fulham, the new refuge of London's young and upwardly mobile? And what exactly is a "Lady"?

"You'll to have find out for yourself; we don't know much about the place," said tbe BTA man, waving goodbye with his umbrella. "It's the Putney Bridge stop on the underground."

No. 10 Doneraile Street looked rather like all the other houses in Fulham, a sturdy, turn-of-the-century, working-class neighborhood with rows of small, identical, two-story buildings set close to the curb. Lady Hartley's house, however, was not quite the same within.

This handsome, slender woman told me over tea in the front parlor that afternoon that she had moved up from the Sussex countryside two years ago. She had hunted for and found a Fulham novelty, a house with a substantial rear garden.

Doneraile Street, built and developed in 1906 on the orchard of a former palace, has the loveliest gardens in the district. From her kitchen, a door opens onto a little Eden shaded by ancient apple trees. Serenity reigns in the garden unless you are joined by Lady Hartley's two pet pugs — Lollipop and Lupin — who run in furious little circles as though propelled by wind-up keys.

Believe me, the lady of the house does not spend her days idling between parlor and garden. We were then both mourning the close of the 1978 Wimbledon championshps, to which she has repaired daily in her red car. During my three-day stay I saw her come and go often. Yet she was home enough to cook and clean. The house was spotless, and I never saw a maid.

She admitted to having household help four hours a week. "I've never done housework before, I've been very spoiled," she said, "but I find in my advancing age I rather enjoy it."

No. 10 Doneraile Street may have been the only bed and breakfast operation in London that crowded July week with space available. Lady Hartley rents just two rooms on the second floor (hers is the third), and at last one or both are often empty. She advertises in the Paris Herald Tribune, but sometimes goes weeks without a guest. I thought perhaps in her easy going, aristocratic way she preferred the random trickle of business, but I was wrong. She said she'd love a full house.

One of her built-in problems, which I happen to think an asset, is Fulham's remoteness from inner London. New visitors probably prefer to be nearer the heart of things, and yet if you can do without the beat of Piccadilly and Knightsbridge day and night, I recommend moving in with the natives near Putney Bridge. It's only a half-hour ride by tube and hardly an odyssey by the Nos. 74 and 30 buses. Often as not, Lady Hartley herself will deliver you to town.

For me, riding the District Line to and from Fulham was like becoming a temporary Londoner. At Putney Bridge I'd cross the road cut through the churchyard at Fulham's All Saints Church, past the rows of mossy, upright gravestones, then through Bishops Park and along the Thames where rowers glided by in silent sculls. Nights, the park was alive with tennis (there are 15 public courts), lawn bowling, and calypso music played at a bandshell by a West Indian steel band.

Service at Lady Hartley's was no less attentive than at the Savoy. My room in the trees above Doneraile was a gem. It had a sofa under the window, a dressing table, a case of hardcover books, and filmy white curtains that danced in the morning breeze. For breakfast, in the dining room, I invariably had dry cereal and juice followed by a boiled egg (covered with a tiny cozy); toast, croissant, marmalade, and jam. Lady Hartley left me with the Telegraph and took what she calls "the rag," a morning tabloid, into the kitchen with her.

Did I say service? One day when I needed some shirts laundered in a hurry, she said, "Give them to me. I'll try to find a place to run them in while I'm driving into town." At 6 p.m. the shirts were on my bed, washed and ironed. She had done the job herself. "It was rather nostalgic," she said. "It took me back to the days when I washed for my sons."

There was a modest fee, of course, but who could object to the overall daily rate (less then $20 for one, under $30 for two)?

On my last morning, as Lady Hartley drove me to the terminal, I posed some still-nagging questions. As for her title, she said, she got it when her ex-husband was made an Royal Air Force air marshal, giving him automatic knighthood and making her an automatic lady. But that hasn't stopped guests from calling her by her frist name, Toni.

"I don't mind. 'Lady Hartley' sounds frightfully formal anyway," she said.

West Coast Cruises
Swiftsure Tours proudly presents its cruise program for 1979. Rarely are there such opportunities for travellers wanting west coast cruising at affordable prices. Awaiting you now are a multitude of islands with hidden coves and sandy beaches, mountain-rimmed fjords, islets teeming with seabirds, natural hotsprings, and more.

DESOLATION SOUND May 9-11, '79
This spring make it your goal to see the breathtaking beauty of the fjords and inlets at the north end of the Strait of Georgia. On this three-day cruise, we'll journey from Victoria, through the Gulf Islands and across the strait to picturesque Lasqueti Island. To the north we'll explore Desolation Sound and Bute Inlet, rimmed by snow-capped mountains. A scenic trip through Discovery Passage will bring us to our final destination, Campbell River. Tour price from $178 per person. Includes 3 days cruising, two nights accommodation and all meals.

SAN JUAN ISLANDS May 5-7, '79
Cruise the beautiful San Juan Islands this spring on our chartered 75-foot ship. Spend the night aboard, or at the renowned Rosario Resort Hotel. Enjoy coastal scenery and simply relaxing on deck, or try your hand at fishing. At Rosario, have a swim and sauna, play tennis or take a stroll through Moran State Park. Tour price from $178 per person. Includes 3 days cruising, 2 nights accommodation and all meals. Fully escorted.

MITLENATCH ISLAND May 12, '79
Prickly-pear cactus, two thousand nesting seabirds and abundant marine life make Mitlenatch a favorite place to visit. There's been a great deal written about this isle, now come see it for yourself. In May, there will be spring flowers in bloom, migrating song birds, cormorants on the cliffs and nesting gulls. Explore the island with your naturalist escort and enjoy a delicious picnic lunch. $35 per person, from Campbell River.

Other spring and summer cruises include: Hot Springs Cove, West Coast Spectacular, Northern Vancouver Island and Queen Charlottes.

Turku 750 Years Old

Reaching a 750th birthday calls for a celebration and that's what Finland is having during 1979. Year-long festivities will mark this milestone for the city of Turku, Finland's former capital.

North Americans who visit Finland, especially during the summer months, will find a wealth of historical, cultural and educational events taking place in this oldest city in the country.

Seven and a half centuries have passed since the founding of the town, and yet few medieval structures from her past remain. Among the most notable are the city's grand 13th-century castle, the scene of a glittering court when Duke Johan took up residence there in the 16th century and Turku's Cathedral, one of Finland's most important medieval historical edifices, dating back to 1229.

There are few ancient monuments of the past left in Turku because of more than 30 major fires, the worst in 1827, which practically leveled the city.

Turku has a romantic character, as the River Aura winds its way through the centre of town, dividing it into two parts. Its embankments are lined with trees and flowers. A stationary frigate moored there, serves as a training school for sailors and as a sea treasure museum; is a permanent attraction lending a picturesque touch to the landscape.

Turku is a major tourist centre today, for Finns and visitors from abroad with her ancient and 20th century attractions. Getting there from Stockholm or Helsinki is easy. It's a leisurely overnight cruise through Finland's intricate archipelago from Sweden (only an hour by plane); a three-hour fast and comfortable train ride from Helsinki, or a half an hour by plane. Whatever the mode of transportation, it is inexpensive. Finland has its own Finnrail Pass, among the lowest rail fares in Europe, entitling travelers to unlimited train travel within the country for a designated length of time. The pass is considered one of the best train buys on the Continent. Also Finnair, the national carrier, provides a holiday ticket for only $145 that allows the visitor to fly the length and breadth of the country as often as he wishes, within a 15 day time limit.

Turku Castle is the city's most popular attraction. It is unusual in its architecture. Centuries succeed each other in the layers of the stone work and all main European styles are represented there. There are Gothic arches on the doors, Renanisance lines on the upper floors and Roman arches downstairs. Today the castle is lively with many banquets and tournaments held within its stone walls. It has also become a vast collection of uniforms, medals and army badges, gold and silver coins and fashions from various periods.

One of the popular attractions in Turku is the Handicrafts Museum. A number of original houses, surviving the 1827 fire, make up this tiny museum community; each containing a valuable collection of artisans' tools from 150 years ago. Workers, in native costumes of past of past eras, ply the trades of long-ago: crafts such as lace-making, shoemaking, tobacco-rolling and candy-making; turning out printed lithographs and other products demanding skills. For about 50 cents, visitors can stroll through the little village, watch the craftsmen at work or try their own hand at certain trades.

The Sibelius museum is one of the most modern sights of Turku. It is more of a "living" museum that pays tribute to Finland's greatest and most revered composer. Regular concerts are given here and visitors can sit comfortably in the building's auditorium and listen to some of the master's works. The streamlined, 20th-century building houses ancient musical instruments, many from other countries, along with original scores by Jean Sibelius, his instruments and other memorabilia.

The celebration for the 750th birthday will continue throughout 1979 and will feature photo exhibitions, sculpture and art exhibitions, concerts, gymnastic shows, parades, regattas, air shows, park concerts, an exhibition of the Orthodox Museum treasures in Turku Castle, boat races, and dozens of other events.

On June 2 there will be a special program in the town Cathedral, and from Aug. 4 to 9 Turku's Summer Festival. A historical pageant will precede the festival on Aug. 4 and a special "happening" is scheduled to take place in town on Aug. 5. The nature of the event will be announced later.

An Anniversary Week has been set aside for Aug. 1 to 10.

Commemorative silver coins, in limited quantity, will be in Finland's banks in August; a special medal will also be issued at that time.

Turku brings its year-long anniversary celebration to a close on December 31 with a grand finale of entertainment.

For more detailed information write to Finland National Tourist Office, 75 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N.Y. 10019, or your local travel agent.

Collect Call Service

OTTAWA — Canadian travel agents and auto club personnel seeking travel information about any region of Canada can now for the first time call collect to the Canadian government Office of Tourism (CGOT) in Ottawa, Industry, Trade and Commerce Minister Jack H. Horner has announced.

Horner, the federal minister responsible for tourism, said that collect calls are now being accepted from anywhere in Canada.

All enquiries receive an immediate response. Callers are advised, however, that this service is not designed to replace existing information systems such as those operated by carriers.

CGOT has distributed 30,000 self-adhesive stickers with the new collect call number of travel trade seminars and through a general mailing to travel agents and auto clubs, with a letter explaining the new collect call system.

The proposal for the new system was enthusiastically approved by the Alliance of Canadian Travel Association (ACTA) when it was first suggested by CGOT officials at ACTA's annual convention in Quebec City in 1978.

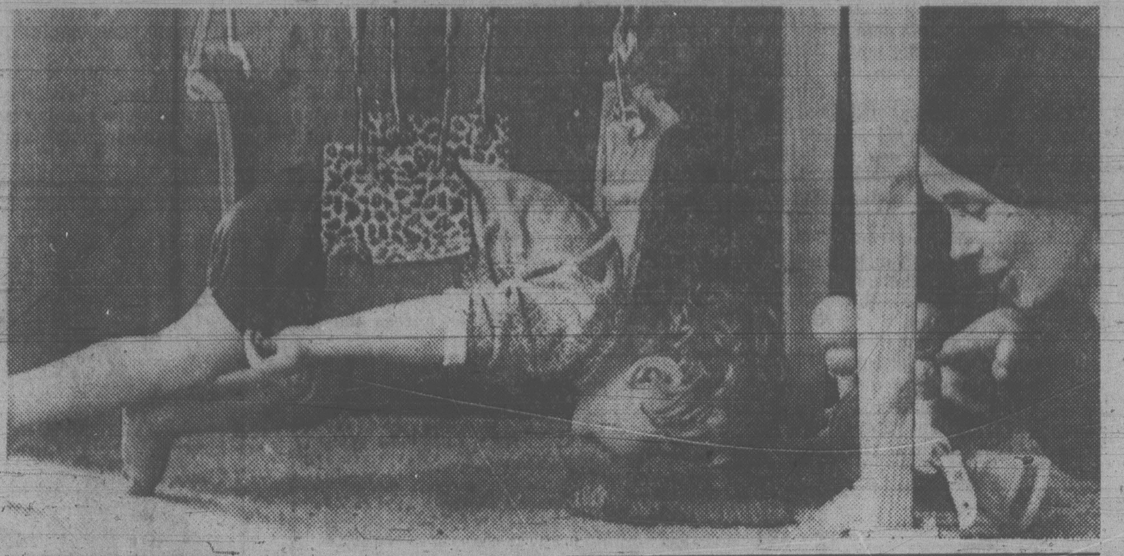
Mom's Love Gives Damaged Tot Hope

By DARLENE BEATTIE



STRUGGLING to overcome brain damage, Cameron Barwick, 2½, uses this anti-gravity harness to move limbs without bearing body weight as his mother and volunteers work to re-program his brain.

LANGLEY (CP) — Gail Barwick's struggle to raise her 2½-year-old brain-damaged son against doctors' advice has seen him change from a blind, insensate spastic to a sighted, aware and crawling child.

Ms. Barwick says doctors advised her to place Cameron in an institution after he suffered brain damage when he was an infant.

"So often doctors give parents of brain-damaged kids the easy way out — unload the child before you fall in love with him," she said in a recent interview.

"One doctor told me I was treating my son like a retarded prince and that I was wasting my time, money and effort.

"Although my son was brain-damaged, he was still my son. I adjusted right away and found out how I could help.

"At 1½ Cameron was vacant, blind and stiff like an ironing board. He had grown only two months neurologically. Now with seven months treatment he has moved up to seven months neurological age. He has progressed slowly but surely to a state of brightness, intelligence and awareness.

"He can see, smiles and vocalizes at pictures. He loves to look at bright dots in math and flowers and makes nice sounds.

"In six months we expect he will be crawling and reading perfectly — that, is the visual concept of looking at print from left to right. Speech should come with crawling."

Although the progress has been heartening for Ms. Barwick, who operates a small goat dairy in this Fraser Valley community, it did not come easy.

And there are many more painstaking hours ahead for her and her army of more than 30 volunteers who spend 15 hours a day in shifts in the hopes that Cameron will one day function as a normal human being — intellectually, physically and socially.

They started with a child born with a congenital heart problem who suffered heart failure during an operation on the aorta. Because of a lack of oxygen, his brain was damaged. He also suffered acidosis, a blood disorder, caused by kidney and liver dysfunction.

He spent two months in hospital in a coma. His weight dropped to two pounds from 7.14 pounds while he existed on intravenous feedings.

Ms. Barwick said doctors offered no hope but she found accommodation at a nearby hotel and, staying by Cameron's side from morning to night, slowly introduced him to a bottle until she brought him home at five pounds.

"I was disappointed that the staff had little hope because where there's little hope, there's no help," she said.

Cameron was given physiotherapy when he was six months old but the treatments were ineffective because they only treated the symptoms, not the cause — the brain injury. The brain had to be motivated.

Finally she took him to the Institutes for the Achievement of Human Potential in Philadelphia last July, and after a program of treatment was developed, she knocked on doors to get the needed volunteer help.

Treatment is aimed at programming the brain to develop along alternative pathways, to bypass damaged cells, and activate cells which have not been used.

Scientists believe people use only 10 per cent of their brain capacity. Their theory is that the brain is a computer that must be programmed. Most programming is genetically supplied and is increased as a child goes through regular development. But Cameron is starting from scratch.

The key to progamming the brain is mobility and after all mobility functions are organized, intellectual abilities will follow. Treatments to stimulate mobility are given in the home.

Cameron's day begins with two people pulling straps attached to his vest at a rate of 26 times a minute to get his respiratory rate down and relax him for a floor program in which he has an opportunity to crawl.

Next comes a sensory motor input program which is repeated several times during the day. The program combines an intelligence section geared to seeing words, faces, animals, objects, plus mathematics in dots.

Later in the day he is suspended from an anti-gravity device which allows his hands and feet to remain in contact with the floor. The device gives him a sense of freedom of movement and enjoyment without feeling the weight of his body, his mother said.

He also is required to make 15 trips down an eight-foot slide slanted on an angle of 15 degrees. He goes to bed at 9:30 p.m. — on the floor — so he can crawl if he wants to.

The treatment might be rigorous but it is necessary, says Ms. Barwick.

"Until he is self-sufficient he is useless and a burden. He requires that virtually everything be done for him. And so, the best love I can give him is to encourage him to be self-sufficient."

Loto Winner Learns a Bitter $500,000 Lesson

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Two years after winning a million dollars in the Loto Canada lottery, Jim Waldner has learned a bitter investment lesson.

Now he's trying to keep from losing half of his windfall fortune.

That's the approximate amount Waldner says he's sunk into the Captain Scott Fish and Chips fast food chain.

The day of reckoning comes Monday when creditors meet at the Hotel Grosvenor in Vancouver to decide the future of Captain Scott Fish and Chips (1978) Ltd.

The company, with more than a million dollars in debts, has filed a proposal under the Bankruptcy Act.

The proposal would pay out the creditors by offering one preferred share for every dollar claimed.

If the proposal is not accepted, some financial experts believe the company will have little other recourse but to go into bankruptcy.

The result would be devastating as far as Waldner is concerned but he says he doesn't think it will happen. And as a man with a 49 per cent interest in the company, and plenty of spare cash still in his pocket to boot, his opinion carries a lot of clout.

Waldner said he was originally only interested in acquiring a franchise to open a Captain Scott outlet in a new mall in Regina. But one thing led to another and in January, 1978 he decided to purchase the franchise and royalty rights to the chain.

The seller was Victoria businessman Syvert Mytting whose company, Captain Scott Fish and Chips Ltd., had founded the business in Prince George in 1975 in partnership with Ronald Scott, now a resident of Saanichton.

Scott, who lent his name and, like Col. Sanders, his face to the corporate image, left the company in 1977.

He has since secured a $24,000 loan from the federal development bank and opened a new restaurant on Quadra, Spud & Fillet Fish and Chips.

Waldner paid $100,000 cash to Mytting and assumed the company's liabilities which totalled about $500,000.

In the months that followed, while the number of Captain Scott outlets continued to grow — they now total 61 across Canada and the United States — financial affairs at head office in Surrey steadily worsened.

Waldner said the problem was he remained in Regina to manage his other businesses — a campground, concession stand and small trucking firm — and left two men in charge of the Captain Scott operation.

He said that by late summer the company's debts had risen to about $800,000. His managers hired a staff of 35 whose primary task was to collect royalties that averaged only about $28,000 a month.

Finally in October, Waldner handed over a 51 per cent interest in his company to Herbert Land of Toronto in exchange for Land's expertise in managing fast food operations. Land has a 21 per cent interest in the Wendy's Hamburger chain in Ontario.

Waldner regards his own position with the company as a sort of silent partner.

Late last fall troubles erupted on another Captain Scott front when Mytting's company, Captain Scott Fish and Chips, a partnership of Captain Scott Fish and Chips Ltd., and Century Foods both of Victoria, went bankrupt.

Although it had no effect on individual outlets, the action cast a cloud over the entire Captain Scott operation, if only through the association by name alone.

The bankrupt company declared liabilities of $593,285 and listed 185 creditors.

Among its assets was a $216,500 loan to Captain Scott Fish and Chips (1978) Ltd., Waldner and Land's firm.

Craig Bushell of Coopers and Lybrand of Vancouver, trustee in the bankruptcy action, said the proposal submitted by Waldner and Land to solve the 1978 company's problems looks better on the surface than it actually is.

Under the proposal the company would pay off 50 per cent of all claims under $500. All creditors would have the option of receiving preferred shares with an annual dividend of 10 per cent of the royalty revenues or 10 per cent of the face value of the shares, whichever is the lesser.

Ten per cent of royalties works out to about $30,000, and considering the company's declared indebtedness of $924,000, that represents just over a three per cent return on investment, Bushell said.

"To even get a 10 per cent return the company would have to be three times bigger than it already is," Bushell said.

The picture may be even worse. Bushell noted nine firms and individuals have not defined their claims against the company. They include Piscean Food of Portland, Ore., Tomanik Holdings of Calgary, Halvorsen Investments of Victoria, J. DeBurhr of Piscean Foods, Small Fry Enterprises of Calgary, Estee Enterprises of Edmonton, David Morrell of Brandon, Man., Yarrow Investments and Andrews and York Franchise Marketing International. The last two companies give their head office as the same address in Surrey as Captain Scott 1978 Ltd.

Waldner agrees the proposal has its shortcomings.

"I still feel it's a good company," he said. "It was just a situation where the people who were running it before, ran it into the ground."

"I've always trusted people before. Out here we're just country boys. We do all our deals by a handshake. But I've found out one thing. When you go to trust a big city person, look out."

Bald by Age 30?

WILMSLOW, England (CP) — Hair expert Andrew Bell says women today put far too much "junk" on their hair and cut it far too often. If they don't ease up, he says, they'll be bald by the age of 30.

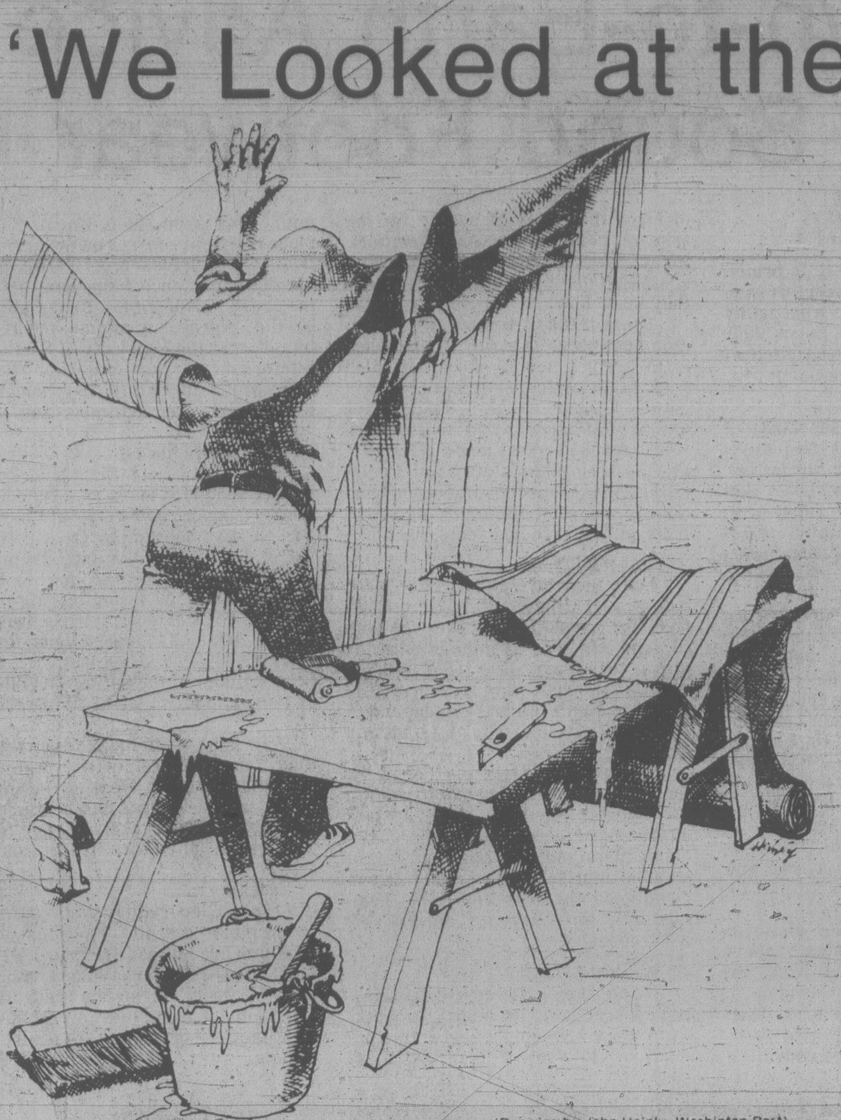
'We Looked at the Wall and Wept'



(Drawing by John Heinly, Washinton Post)

By SARAH BOOTH CONROY
Washington Post

An innocent bystander asked the other day, "Have you ever removed wallpaper?"

The Horrible Experience rose like Godzilla from the swamp of my subconscious. It is not that we have ever taken off wallpaper. But there were the two years when we tried to get it off.

Twenty-five years ago, all our young married friends were buying neat $10,000 houses in the suburbs with ceiling electric heat, two bedrooms and a convertible bedroom-dining el. Not us. We bought an 1860s carpenter gothic, 12-room house in the student housing area near the university. The house had belonged to a fellow former student who had paid his way through college renting rooms to Chinese students who cooked marvelous and strange concoctions in their rooms.

Every room was papered. The living room had a different design on each wall. I remember the panel of old-fashioned people going into church. The designs of the rest I have successfully repressed. On each wall, of course, there were 90 years of repapering. The walls were, in effect, laminated.

As always, we were trying to do it on the cheap. So we did not rent a wallpaper steamer as everyone advised us to. We decided it would work just as well if we sponged the wall with hot water. How innocent we were. After sponging for a while, we took to throwing basins of hot water on the wall in a futile effort to wet it down. You can imagine the mess.

We scraped and scraped and scraped and sloshed and cursed and sweated. The few pieces of wallpaper we were able to get off either slithered to the floor and stuck or slithered onto us and stuck, until we looked like medieval wildmen. I have no idea what ancient glue was used on that wallpaper, but if I had the formula I would be rich now. You could glue a meteor to the moon with it.

More of the plaster came off than wallpaper. Great hunks and hulks fell before our fevered gouging. We got down to the lathing in more places than we were down to just plaster.

After nights and nights of work, we looked at the dining room and wept. The wall looked as though it had grown alligator scales. My husband (or maybe it was I, we argue considerably about who was to blame) suggested that we use a textured paint to mask the three-dimensional effects. At this distance, I can't remember whether there was such a thing in those Dark Ages as a textured paint. In any case, we decided, as usual, to do it the hard way by mixing blasting sand with the paint.

It being the 1950s, we chose a trendy color: chartreuse. (Remember chartreuse? Not if you're under 40). My husband, noble soul that he is, said, "I'll put it on. You tend to making the tea." (This was before the time when it would have been expected of me to insist on my rights to paint, thank heaven).

When it was finished, we thought it looked pretty good, but that may have been an illusion caused by the hard work affecting the brain.

Just the other day my husband and I were talking about it. And I asked him, "Why did you use blasting sand?"

"That's the only way," he said, "to make those sharp peaks that cut your skin as you went by."

Givenchy, Dior Have the Kids Labelled

By ANNE-MARIE SCHIRO

Plaid party dress by Saint Laurent

Mother-daughter dressing isn't what it used to be. No more matching pinafores in red-and-white-checked gingham whipped up on the sewing machine by Mother herself.

The idea now is to match not the clothes but the label — if, that is, Mother is the type who wears Yves Saint Laurent, Anne Klein or Cacharel. All three are now making little girls' clothes. And, by next winter, Givenchy and Dior will be making them, too.

They're not cheap, but they're a lot less than the big girls' clothes from the same designers.

A Saint Laurent dress in the seven to 14 range might be $40 as opposed to $400 in adult sizes. And, however one may deplore the notion of children sporting designer labels, the boys have been ahead of the girls on that score: There have been boys' lines for several years by Cardin, Givenchy, Geoffrey Beene, Ralph Lauren and even Saint Laurent.

Actually, Cacharel has made children's clothes off and on for several years and even tried licensing an American manufacturer one season. But Cacharel has now decided to set up a special children's division and has already booked more than 300 stores across the country for its first season.

Saint Laurent had previously exported one or two very expensive things to special shops here but has now licensed Seibel & Stern, a U.S. company that has been in business more than 50 years, to produce a line here. There are also licensees in Italy, West Germany and Japan, so little girls all over the world can be equally chic, or spoiled, depending on your point of view.

The Saint Laurent things, for girls ages three to 13, are making their debut in stores this month. Here's what you can expect to see: simple dresses and sportswear with loose silhouettes, button closings, big pockets, unfussy ruffles or eyelet trimming on the party clothes, and everything's in all-American washable fabrics.

"Saint Laurent has to approve of every garment," said Patricia Barkin, who's in charge of the line for Seibel & Stern and is the one who goes to Paris to work things out with the master. "he sends us sketches, then we work out the colors and groupings and fabrics and I bring the samples to Paris for acceptance.

One of the most expensive designs for spring is a full-skirted dress with a flounced hem, puff sleeves, buttons down the back, and a belt that ties in a big bow in back. It will sell for about $38 in four to six, $42 in seven to 14. It comes in both a beige polyester-rayon with tiny white dots and in a pastel plaid cotton.

The sportswear is mainly in nautical prints of red, white and blue and includes boxer shorts, polo shirts and, of course, jeans. The jeans, which go up to $25 in preteen sizes, have the YSL insigne on the back pocket and tapered legs that are meant to be rolled up.

Bloomingdale's and Saks Fifth Avenue will introduce the Saint Laurent things later this month, to be followed by Bergdorf Goodman, Pumpkins & Monkeys and big stores all across the country.

Colors range from the sublety of beige or white linen to such currently popular brights as fuchsia, jade, red and amethyst. Colors and fabrics are all meant to work together so a little girl, like her fashionable mother, can have an extensive wardrobe based on a few well-chosen separates. The Anne Klein children's line, which has its own lion-with-cub logo, has been made by Supak for the last year after an unsuccessful attempt by another manufacturer.

Altman's and Saks Fifth Avenue carry the full range of sizes for four through preteen, but most stores opted for only seven to 14 or only pre-teen sizes.

Cacharel for Children is designed and made in Paris by Jean Cacharel, using many of the same Liberty print cottons he favors in his women's line. They come in French sizes two to 14, except for the jeans, which are made here in American sizes four to 14.

There are lots of dresses, including a printed sailor-collar style, a flounced sundress with rows of discrete embroidery, a full smock dress with a flounced hem, lace edging and buttons down the back, and a double sundress that has a layer of printed voile over solid cotton. Prices range from about $52 to well over $100.

Trousers, which have cuffs, come with pleats or a drawstring. The prettiest skirt is a dirndl with big patch pockets. Blouses are very nuch like those in the women's line, including classic shirts and baby-doll smocks.

How to telephone for help when you can't make it
to a telephone.

Simply push the button on the Protectalert transmitter, carried in the pocket or around the neck. From a distance of up to 200ft. (150 meters), it will trigger an automatic telephone dialer which will call up to ten pre-recorded requests for help. If a number is engaged, or unanswered, the dialer will skip to the next one. Think of Protectalert for the elderly. For people with heart problems, diabetes, epilipsy and speech problems. For the deaf, the blind and paraplegics. In an emergency it can get a message to a doctor, hospital, family or friends.

Call us for a demonstration. We'll also show you a dual channel model that accepts signals from fire detectors and burglar alarms. As well as from someone you love who is in distress.

Doing the Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

Your help is needed now . . .

The Arthritis Society . . . which used to be known as C.A.R.S. . . . is building a new facility at King's Road and Richmond . . . to take care of the needs of arthritis sufferers in Victoria and lower Vancouver Island . . . The cost of this is $350,000 . . . quite a bit of which they now have . . . but there's still a need for further donations to make the new expanded facility a reality . . . and any amount you're able to give . . . no matter how small . . . will be most gratefully received! . . . Now that's the gist of our message today . . . but there's really much more we'd like to say because we ourselves have had many treatments from these dedicated people and we can't tell you enough about the blessed relief from pain . . . the way we've learned to cope with our own arthritis problem . . . at the present little arthritis clinic on Cook St.! . . . It's much too small, though, to handle many patients per day and carry out all the various treatments . . . which include physio and occupational therapy treatments along with counselling, and the making of appliances for helping to make the lot of the arthritis sufferer easier . . . So it's right from the heart that we ask you to send a donation (which, by the way, is tax deductible) . . . Either mail your donation to The Arthritis Society, P.O. Box 73, Victoria, B.C. V8W 2M1 . . . or drop it in to Miss Frith's, where they'll make out your receipt on the spot! . . . Miss Frith Fashions, 1619 Douglas St., 383-7181.

We met some old friends! . . .

Every time we go to San Diego we make a point of visiting certain gift shops both there and in La Jolla and Rancho Santa Fe where past experience has taught us they always have something uniquely different upon which to feast our eyes! . . . Well, this time we did it again . . . and got the surprise of our life! . . . Just about every single thing which delighted us we'd seen before . . . right here in little ol' Victoria at Bath & Kitchen . . . which bears out B & K's contention that you don't need to go to Seattle (or California) for "different" bathroom and kitchen accessories . . . We dropped by this week and saw all sorts of new kitchen novelties, notably some delightful things made from wood . . . racks to hang mugs and keys and towels and aprons and etceteras . . . Shelves hanging on canvas tapes for spices or what-have-you . . . Relish sets on a wooden tray . . . little cabinets to hang on a kitchen wall . . . We've mentioned this before, but B & K's back-of-door racks are really fantastic for providing extra towel or drying space in an apartment bathroom . . . No screws or nails are needed, and they come in white, pink, brown, yellow and brass . . . There are some lovely candles made in Shawnigan Lake . . . in the shape of birds, mice, owls, lady bugs, snails, goats, puppy dogs, etc. . . . Super gift ideas! And charming Ineke ceramics for bathroom or kitchen . . . at . . Bath & Kitchen, James Bay Square, Simcoe & Menzies St., 385-2523.

They'll do great things for your hair! . . .

We started to write this while we were having our hair done at The Hair Society on Monday . . . First time we'd seen the inside of a hairdressing salon since we went holidaying in California a month ago . . . And you know what brought about this happy state of affairs? . . . The fact that George had given us such a super cut and permanent before we left! . . . We swam and sunned and even got rained on . . . without a single thought to our hair, which we merely washed and let dry, then shaped a bit with a hair brush . . . Beautiful! . . . Goodness knows, we didn't want to spend our precious time and expensive dollars having our hair done . . . and we never needed to . . . So one of the feelings we've come home with is a real sense of gratitude to The Hair Society whose staff are so expert . . . so caring in every way that we feel they've made a real contribution to the success of our holiday! . . . Now that spring is just around the corner, maybe you're thinking you'd like to do something about YOUR hair! . . . Take our advice and make an appointment at The Hair Society . . . You can be certain of getting the kind of cut you want . . . you won't be taking any chances . . . And your perm, if you need one, or color, will be blended for you alone . . . and carried out by professionals who take a real pride in their work! . . . The Hair Society, 1712 Douglas St., 385-8133 and Witch's Hut, 728 View St., 388-7368.

Stunning suits for city wear . . .

If ever a city was particularly well adapted to the wearing of suits, Victoria is it! . . . And for spring suits that are smashing and nostalgic and completely beautiful . . . Gibson's is the place to find them! . . . We saw some beauties there this week . . . One, a grey-cream-camel-white boucle fabric, whose waist-length jacket is elasticized, as are the ¾-length sleeves . . . and there's a tiny lapel collar which can be turned up to look extra interesting . . . Skirt, like all new skirts whether they have pleats or slits, has the look of straightness . . . A smashing French suit in all-washable cotton and polyester is white and biscuit . . . Beautiful white blazer jacket and biscuit skirt with white polka dots . . . blouse in reverse colors, and matching scarf . . . fuller skirt stitched down at the top . . . Also from France, grey and beige fine tweed suits with differing but harmonizing patterns in skirt and jacket . . . The former is full with flat top and buttoned fly front . . . White leather piping on the yoke, patch pockets and belt of jacket . . . These suits are very light weight . . . perfect for our Victoria spring weather . . . You don't find many knit suits around nowadays . . . But Gibson's have a superb one in either cream or navy . . . Plain, simple shorter jacket and straight skirt with a slight opening like a front wrap . . . Touches of gold on the buttons and belt of the white one . . . silver on the navy . . . Gibson's, 708 View St., 384-5913.

Sandals . . . basis of smart spring wardrobes . . .

For downright foot flattery you can't beat sandals . . . which happily, have come on stronger than ever for spring! . . . We saw the new patterns in d'Antonelli sandals this week in Munday's . . . They're pretty as can be and beautifully crafted by one of our finest Canadian shoe manufacturers. What's more, they aren't outrageously expensive as shoe prices go today! . . . There's a dainty fabric sandal on a highish heel with gold toe piece and sling stay . . . asymmetrical strap . . . In gardenia (bone), nectar (beige) and royal blue, at $45 . . . A pearlized kid sandal in bone and lapis blue also has a gold toe piece and stay which holds the back sling in place . . . $57 . . . Handbags to match in pearlized leather are priced from $58 to $66 . . . A smart T-strap sandal in jasmine kid has a cool, perforated leather vamp . . . $55 . . . All of these have high heels, but there's a mid-heel sandal with a wide mesh vamp with leather trim, and instep strap . . . very well-fitting, and cool on the hottest days . . . White with white trim, bone with beige kid and navy with navy . . . $52 . . . Finally, from d'Antonelli . . . a very nice and well-fitting perforated leather pump with a comfortable mid heel, moc vamp with gore . . . This comes in either white or peanut seeds . . . (don't you love the names of the colors?) . . . and the price is $60 at . . . Munday's, 1203 Douglas St., 383-2211.

Dresses for every occasion . . .

If you're looking for a new dress for spring or summer . . . Charmante's should be your first port of call . . . because they really have a very choice selection . . . Cool cottons, both sleeveless and long-sleeved styles, by Ladies' Pride, Ports International and Josef of Montreal, among others . . . One of these Josef dresses we particularly liked is a simple style in 100% cotton . . . with drop shoulder short sleeve and elasticized waist . . . In beige or gold, it's a go-everywhere dress for warmer days . . . Same observation about the Ports shirtwaist dress which buttons right down the front, and has long sleeves for the woman who prefers to keep her arms covered. In either blue or cream 100% cotton . . . More cotton in Ladies' Pride . . . a make which fits so many figures so well! . . . There's a sleeveless navy and white, or beige and white cool-looking print . . . Another in a polished cotton combining paisley and floral designs for a very pretty effect . . . Pink tones in this one, and another pretty print in a pink and green floral pattern . . . Charmante's have new afternoon and after-fives in soft colors and fabrics . . . The jacket dress is once more in evidence . . . Styles by Tricot d'Or in a soft green and white poly print, and by Ladies' Pride in a brown poly print. Still a good selection of youthful half size dresses . . . Charmante's Hillside Shopping Centre, 595-1555.

Our daily bread . . .

Not for nothing has bread become synonymous with the nourishment our bodies need for health and energy . . . (and if you're trying to lose weight, not to worry . . . all the best diets prescribe at least two slices of bread a day!) . . . Since bread is so important to good nutrition, why not have the best? . . . Vita-Love has bread such as we've seldom tasted in our life . . . It's absolutely delicious! . . . There are quite a variety of these wonderful breads right from Vita-Love's Sunflower Ovens . . . There's Sunflower Bread . . . Nature's Best . . . Wheat Germ . . . Family Bread, and Whole Body — an old-fashioned round loaf . . . We've tried them all, and would be hard put to single out any one as being the most delectable! They're all made with really good ingredients . . . Wholesome flowering seeds, sprouting grains and safflower oil, without any kind of animal products, additives or preservatives . . . and these good wholesome ingredients are combined in various ways to give you the different flavors and textures in the breads . . . Vita-Love sells some very special bread too . . . Salt-free Bread and sugar-free bread for people on restricted diets . . . We honestly think it's worth a visit to Vita-Love just for their bread alone . . . but there are so many other good things you won't be able to resist! . . . Vita-Love Health Products, James Bay Square, Simcoe & Menzies St., 382-6022.

'Kids Lib' Advocates Shirk Responsibility?

OTTAWA (CP) — Adults who advocate "kids lib" and not children's rights are trying to shirk their responsibilities, says Barbara Chisholm, a Toronto social worker and child welfare consultant.

She is an advocate of children's rights. But the more extreme kid's lib movement "suggests the adult world wishes to be rid of the responsibility for children."

"We cannot abandon children to their freedom," said Ms. Chisholm.

A children's right movement was necessary because "we cannot rely on biological parents to protect a child's life."

Down-to-Earth Advice On Sound Footwear

By JANE E. BRODY
New York Times

If the shoe fits, wear it. In principle, few would disagree with this sage advice. But judging from what many people, especially women, put on their feet, a more accurate description of the situation is, "If the shoe doesn't fit, wear it anyway."

Despite the growing popularity of comfortable hiking boots and shoes with wide toes and low or "negative" heels, the offices of podiatrists and orthopedic surgeons are filled with people suffering the painful consequences of wearing ill-fitting shoes that throw the feet out of line and the body off balance.

The human foot is an intricate structure well designed for supporting a two-legged animal that walks and talks and sometimes runs. But if any of its 26 bones are put in an unnatural position by the shoe that was intended to protect it, the balance and function of all the other bones are disrupted. The joints are then unable to function properly, and the result can be contracted, deformed toes, osteoarthritis, weakness of the foot muscles, misdirected tendons and ligaments, and strain on supporting tissues in the leg and back.

The recent passion for platform soles and clogs and the latest fashion of four-to six-inch spike heels on women's boots and disco sandals is keeping foot doctors very busy these days. While it is unlikely that fashion-conscious adults will be convinced to forgo their idea of beauty for the sake of health, safety and comfort, many others would be delighted to buy shoes that don't hurt their feet, if only they knew how.

From infancy onward, the "common knowledge" on how — and when — to select a pair of shoes is riddled with myth and misconception. As a result, people waste extraordinary amounts of money, and cause themselves much needless discomfort, buying the wrong kinds of shoes. Podiatrists and orthopedic surgeons around the country offer the following guidelines on foot care and shoe selection.

Barefoot:

Bare feet are highly desirable for babies who cannot yet walk, and all right for people of any age who trek on sand and soft, unpolluted earth or grass. Everyone else should have some kind of covering to support the foot in its battle against cement and to protect it from injury by obstacles and debris.

Dr. Alexander Hersh, chief of the foot service at the New York Hospital for Special Surgery, even advises against bare feet at home, where slivers of glass and pins and needles can stab the unprotected foot, and toes can be stubbed and even broken on furniture and miscellaneous objects left lying about.

Babies' Shoes:

A baby does not need to wear shoes of any sort until he begins to walk. Even then the only reason for the shoes is to protect his feet from injury and keep them warm. Shoes place restrictive forces on the growing bones in a baby's foot. "Most people put shoes on a baby long before they need to," noted Dr. Rene Cailliet, head of physical medicine and rehabilitation at the University of Southern California at Los Angeles. "Baby shoes are mainly for the psychological benefit of the parents and for warmth."

Corrective Shoes:

There is no such thing as a "corrective shoe" for children. Such shoes merely support and guide the foot to prevent an abnormality from getting worse, but they cannot undo the problem. Thus, you may be able to buy special shoes to accommodate and support feet that toe in or are extremely flat, but don't expect them to be corrected by the shoes, says Dr. Pal Scherer, dean of the California College of Podiatric Medicine in San Francisco.

For adults with foot abnormalities that cannot be corrected surgically and that prohibit wearing ordinary shoes, moulded shoes can be made to oder from a cast taken of your feet. These cost anywhere from $100 to $350.

Sneakers:

Despite everything your parents or grandparents may have told you, sneakers are not bad for your feet. In fact, foot specialists say that the flexibility of sneakers makes them ideal for young children, most of whom can wear them all the time with no adverse effects.

Wonderful World of Animals

Tail-less Pigeon Still Can Fly

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: Can a pigeon which just lost its tail feathers to a cat ever fly again? — R.N.

DEAR R.N.: If the pigeon's posterior parts are undamaged — if, in short, it escaped unscathed except for the loss of the tail feathers — it can not only fly again, it can fly right now. Aerial manoeuvres and landings might be less than neat without the stabilizing and rudder effects provided by the tail feathers, but when those feathers grow in, it will fly as well as it did before its close encounter of the feline kind.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Snuffles, my pug, has sore eyes all the time. How can I keep that from happening? — L.L.

DEAR L.L.: Pugs (and Pekes, too) are prone to problems with the eyes because (a) the eyes are prominent and easily injured, (b) the eyelids often don't 'fit" properly to best protect the eye, (they may even turn in so the hair from the lid from the adjacent part of the nose may actually rub continuously on the eyeball causing irritation) and (c) occasionally extra hair grows from the edge of the lower lid against the eyeball. Hair removal or surgery is often the best long-term answer to these problems. When there is actually inflammation and irritation of the eye, appropriate opthalmic drops or ointment are used several times daily. Since these eye conditions frequently cause deep ulceration and rupture of the cornea (the clear outer window) with loss of vision or possibly the loss of the eye, early appropriate treatment by the veterinarian is important. Certainly Snuffles needs expert help.

DEAR DR. MILLER: What do you feel the best cat scratching posts are made of? — I.W.

DEAR I.W.: One of the best and simplest is made from corrugated cardboard. I think my favorite (if I were a cat) would be a section of bark-covered tree limb. Using the carpet-covered types of scratching posts can be a mistake since you are then teaching the cat to scratch on fabric.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Gatsby, my maccaw, is a big bird. He needs more room. I want to make him a huge cage. Can I cover it with a small-sized chicken wire? — T.Y.

DEAR T.Y.: Yes, you could cover the cage with three-quarter-inch chicken wire in a pinch. The biggest disadvantage in using this material is that it might not contain him for long. If Gatsby decided to get out of there, his powerful beak could serve as wire cutters to clip his way to freedom.

Bugs Hitch a Ride

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Cockroaches have been hitching rides on Milwaukee County's urban buses, apparently finding them a nice spot for a banquet.

County Supervisors Daniel Cupertino and Thomas Kujawa are seeking new regulations against littering on buses. They say a crack-down on litter would cut off the food supply for the cockroaches.

"We've had a lot of complaints from riders about people smoking, eating and drinking on the buses," Kujawa said.

8 LOCATIONS TO SERVE YOU

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: Is it possible for a 13-year-old boy to father a child? Our neighbor claims that our 13-year-old son, Vernon, got Cathy, their 15-year-old daughter, pregnant.

Vernon has always been big for his age, but he never was a runaround, and he hardly ever looked at a girl. He has never been in any kind of trouble. He's a good student and an altar boy at church.

Vernon said he fooled around with Cathy "some," but he wasn't the only one. Cathy says she is sure Vernon is the one, but she admitted to having given in to three other boys.

Cathy refuses to have an abortion because it's against her religion. She is very religious and always said she wanted to be a nun.

We don't know where to turn, Abby. If it's our son's baby, we want to do the right thing, but if it isn't, we don't see why we should be stuck with the responsibility, expense and so on.

Can you help us?

MESS

DEAR MESS: First, you need some expert legal advice. If you can't afford a lawyer, consult your local Legal Aid Society. Then get some counseling from your clergyman, Family Service and/or Planned Parenthood office. It is obvious that both Vernon and Cathy need to know a lot more about the birds and the bees and people. What kids don't know can hurt them.

DEAR ABBY: I am 10 and take piano lessons, but I hate it. My lessons are almost over for the year, but my Mom says I have to take piano lessons again next year, and I don't want to.

What should I do?

PIANO LESSON HATER

DEAR HATER: Take your lessons and practise! Many adults have told me that one of the biggest regrets of their lives is having quit music lessons. But not one who quit has said that he was glad he did.

DEAR ABBY: I am 18 and need some advice. my boyfriend (20) keeps asking me questions which are none of his business: such as, how many guys were there before him and who were they.

He said if I don't tell him it means I don't love or trust him. He also says that no matter what I tell him he won't hold it against me.

We've been going together for a year, and this is the only thing we ever fight about.

He insists that the past should be forgotten, yet he keeps bugging me to tell him everything about mine. I never ask him any questions about his.

What should I do? I really love him, and I don't want to lose him.

BUGGED

DEAR BUGGED: Tell your boyfriend he's absolutely right — the past should be forgotten. And if he doesn't quit bugging you, it means HE doesn't love or trust YOU.

CONFIDENTIAL TO DISCOURAGED: Try harder. Self-discipline can be just as self-satisfying as self-indulgence. And infinitely more rewarding.

DEAR ABBY: I am an ordained mimister in the Presbyterian Church. I have tried in all good faith to fulfill my duties as a husband and father (we have two young children), but my efforts have been rejected by my wife.

She left me for another man . Soon after, she decided she wanted our house and children (but not me), so she petitioned the court and was awarded temporary custody of the children plus possession of our home. This meant that I, who had cared for the children after she deserted us, had to pack up and leave.

Abby, this automatic favoritism the courts have toward mothers is unjust. My wife has shown herself to be unfaithful and unfit to raise the children. Yet I am the one who is being punished.

I want my house and children back. What should I do?

BACHLEOR FATHER

DEAR FATHER: You say you have a good lawyer. Good. You need one. Take his advice. Be patient. The wheels of justice grind slowly. Practice what you preach: "The Lord never gives us a heavier load than we can carry."

New Hope for Diabetics

your health

By L. L. Coleman, MD

Diabetics have an additional hope that may soon revolutionize the treatment and control of their chronic illness.

An artificial pancreas which is capable of keeping blood sugar levels on a constant normal keel may be available as early as 1981.

The National Institutes of Health have already set aside a vast amount of money for the continuation of research in this field. A vest-pocket size artificial pancreas, already in experimental use, may be able to sense blood sugar levels, compute individual insulin needs and automatically inject the hormone that will keep the diabetic in stabilized balance.

Dr. John Service, of the Mayo Foundation, said, "Our National Institutes of Health contract calls for us to develop a light, portable artificial pancreas that can be used with a wide range of patients. We face some difficult problems, but the technology necessary for the success of this system is available to us." At least six other research centres are actively engaged in some modification of this remarkable artificial organ.

It is anticipated that the implanted device will collect valuable information from minute to minute about the sugar levels in the blood. It will also correct unusual fluctuations by supplying adequate amounts of insulin directly into the bloodstream. So rapid are the advances in this field of medicine that it is believed such a dream concept may soon be a reality.

A new device is now in use for arthritic patients who are unable to bend their forearm. Dr. Robert G. Volz has created an artificial elbow that can turn, rotate and flex the forearm. Working at the University of Arizona, Dr. Volz has provided near-normal motion for 12 of the patients he has treated in this way.

His patients included those with rheumatoid arthritis who required such a prosthetic elbow because of severe pain or loss of function.

Orthopedic surgeons at the Mayo Clinic are following this work with intense interest. These prosthetic appliances are made of plastic and metal. During the early stages, all of these cases are being studied in order to find the ideal substance that will eventually be used exclusively.

LINES AND WRINKLES
By MARY KAI LUA

Cosmetic science has extracted a skin beauty substance from the bean of a tropical plant that works wonders by making rough, lined face and dry chapped hands look years-younger fast. Use it tonight and you should see vast improvement in the morning. Many small lines around the eyes and mouth may already have disappeared and wrinkles you have given up as hopeless should start to vanish in a few days. But that isn't all. That discouraging weather darkened old-age skin tone fades away. But don't take my word for it . . . use this exciting substance yourself for 7 days . . . satisfaction is guaranteed or return for refund. Its the tropical nut extract that works wonders for wrinkles and lines. It's called Cocrema Dry Skin Creme.

Sharpen Your Skills And Get the Edge

By A.J. HAND

What's the most common tool in use? I'd say it's the knife. You'd be hard put to find a home anywhere without at least one knife kicking around the kitchen. That comes to millions and millions of knives, and most of them have one thing in common. They are dull.

Over the years, the ability to sharpen knives has become a lost art. Most homeowners know nothing about sharpening. Most don't even know what a sharp knife is. They go through life resigned to knives that crush ripe tomatoes or shred the white meat off a turkey.

It needn't be that way. It's really quite easy to sharpen a knife. All it takes is a good sharpening tool and a little practice.

What is a good sharpening tool? There are lots of gadgets around, but none is as good as an old-fashioned stone. I've used a lot of stones, but my favorite is the type called Soft Arkansas. It's made from a vein of quartz found around Hot Springs, Ark. I like it because it works quickly yet it produces an extremely keen edge. Most fast-working stones are too coarse to produce keen edges, but Soft Arkansas is an exception.

A fairly large bench stone will cost about $15. That's more than a small pocket stone, but big stones are easier to use and well worth the extra money.

There's no trick to using a stone. All you have to do is slide the knife over the stone at the proper angle, first one side of the blade and then the other. The proper angle is about 20 degrees, and it's important that you maintain this angle at all times, without a lot of wobbling around. It's easiest to do this if you place the stone on a non-skid surface, or fasten it down in some manner. This leaves both hands free to hold the knife firmly at the proper 20-degree angle.

If you have trouble visualizing 20 degrees, take the 90-degree corner of a sheet of paper. Fold it in half. That's 45 degrees. Fold it in half again and you get 22½ degrees. That's close enough to 20 degrees for our purposes.

Spread a film of sharpening oil or any light oil over the stone. Holding the knife at approximately 20 degrees — use the folded paper as a guide if you like — stroke the knife firmly over the stone. Work just as though you are trying to slice a thin layer off the top of the stone. See the sketch.

Stroke one side of the blade and then the other. After about five strokes on each side of the blade, stop and examine your work. Running along the length of the blade, at or very close to the edge, will be a thin ribbon of shiny, clean metal. This ribbon defines the area you have just honed. If the ribbon extends all the way to the cutting edge, along the entire length of the blade (both sides of the blade), stop honing.

Top Movie - Top Toy

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Kenner Products officials figure Star Wars will remain "The Force" in the toy market for years to come.

Kenner officials held an unveiling of their 1979 toy line, and to no one's surprise, more than 25 of 80 new items related to the 20th Century-Fox film.

There were R2-D2s that clicked, evil-looking Darth Vaders brandishing light sabres, imperial stormtroopers riding patrol lizards, jawa sand crawlers rumbling by remote control.

Toys based on the hit movie became the biggest sellers in the history of the toy industry last year. And officials at Kenner, the exclusive manufacturer of Star Wars items, don't see the movie and toy craze fading in the near future.

Star Wars created as much a stir in the toy industry as it did in movie circles. More than 25 million Star Wars figures were sold last year, over 5 million vehicles, and "all the R2-D2s we could manufacture," according to Posner.

Crocheted swans in exquisite centrepice

KNIT AND CHAT

How to Cover Coat Hangers

By MAY E. MacLEAN

Two letters this week from readers with suggestions for making coat hanger covers as bazaar items.

Mrs. Baines of Alberta points out that stuffed coat hangers will prevent shoulder lines from forming in garments and help to prevent wide or lowneck dresses from slipping off.

Wrap the clear plastic bags from the cleaners around the wire coat hanger until surface is smooth and plump. Lay stuffed hanger on a piece of folded, washable colorfast material and cut around leaving 1½ inches for a seam at the bottom.

With right sides of material together, machine the sloping shoulder edges, turn right side out and insert stuffed hanger. Turn in and sew the bottom edge. Wind matching ribbon or material around the hook part.

Mrs. Goodall of Ontario gives this suggestion, which requires about one ounce of four-ply knitting worsted and a size G or 6 Susan Bates crochet hook. Chain 10 rather loosely. First row — single crochet into second stitch from hook, chain two, single crochet into same stitch, shell made, (miss one stitch, into next stitch, single crochet, two chain and single crochet), repeat directions in brackets across row making five shells, chain one, turn.

Second row — (Shell into centre of first shell of previous row). Repeat directions in backets across row, chain one turn. Continue to repeat second row until piece measures about 14 inches. Hanger cover should not be as long as the hanger in order to have a snug fit.

Cover hanger with one thickness of material of matching or contrasting color. Find centre of crochet cover and pull over hook, then neatly sew cover from each end of wooden hanger to the centre.

So many of you have written asking for a pattern of crocheted swans that I am pleased to feature this particular coffee table mat. It makes an exquisite centrepiece in any room setting and would be an ideal gift for a special friend who does not crochet herself.

Drought Diet: Champagne And Lobsters

VILA, NEW HEBRIDES (CP) — Meat and vegetables have been in short supply on this northern New Hebrides island in recent months because of a prolonged drought. But Joe Mulders, manager of the tourist bureau, says that things are looking up in the islands off Australia:

"Fortunately we just had a few showers, but only basic foods, such as freshwater prawns, lobster and champagne, of course, can be served."

Cuppa Explosive

WESTCLIFFE-ON-SEA, England (CP) — Charlie King, 75, had to change a gas cylinder before he could make his morning cuppa. It exploded and brought the house down. King was found uninjured but giggling with shock, sitting in the rubble.

Rental Credit Top Tax Error

EDMONTON (CP) — More than one million Canadians made mistakes on their income-tax returns last year on rental-assistance credits, says Milton Barth, public relations official with the Edmonton district taxation office.

He said mistakes involving Canada pension plan contributions and unemployment insurance premiums were the second and third most-common problems.

Most taxpayers have no trouble following the tax guide, "so I think most problems can be traced back to carelessness."

Barth said his office, while not permitted to fill out the returns, provides information to help people make out their forms. Deadline for filing returns is April 30.

Onions, Leeks Related But Treat Differently

GARDENING
jack beastall

The onion and the leek may not be considered as garden plants of high standing, although most home gardeners aspire to grow both at some time or another with results that vary from success to dismal failure.

Though the onion and the leek might be classed as close cousins, the culture of one is just the opposite of the other, and this fact is not so widely known as it should be.

Most English gardeners can produce a good crop of onions in spite of the vagaries of their summer climate, and we can learn quite a lot from their methods. But when it comes to leeks there are no gardeners to match the skill of those in northern England and the south of Scotland.

This is the area in which horticultural shows are devoted entirely to exhibits of leeks and nothing else, and the competition is so strong the judges use a rule and a pair of calipers on every specimen, and quite often only a fraction of an inch means the difference between first prize and no prize at all.

I don't know how the record for size stands today, but a leek with the white portion 10 to 12 inches long and around two inches in diameter is about the smallest any judge would look at. Incidentally, the Musselburgh strain of leeks takes its name from a town just outside Edinburgh.

Ancient records indicate the leek was cultivated in Egypt in the time of the Pharaohs. While it may have started in this warm climate, its fame in Scotland and colder parts of Wales and northern England rests on its extreme hardiness. The severest of winters fail to harm the plant and it is left in the ground to be lifted as needed, eliminating the storage troubles associated with the onion.

While both leeks and onions will produce some kind of a crop in mostly any type of soil, for good results they need a rich, dry medium loam. This the home gardener makes by adding quantities of humus, in the form of compost, rotted manure or mushroom compost, to the present soil.

The seeds of leeks can be sown in succession from February until the end of April — the early sowings indoors or in a coldframe, and the later ones outdoors in prepared beds as soon as the weather seems settled.

For one sowing only the middle of March is about right, but any time before the end of March is usually satisfactory.

Even sowing at the later date will give a succession for harvesting if the seedlings are removed for transplanting as if the rows were being thinned, leaving the remainder to grow a little larger before moving.

Good leeks result from the manner in which they are planted, and the method used in Scotland and by most market gardeners is worth following.

After the soil has been prepared as above and levelled, a dibber is used to make a one inch wide hole about eight inches deep, and the seedling leek is dropped into this hole completely out of sight.

When all the holes have been made and the seedlings dropped in, a light watering with the hose will wash sufficient soil down and around the roots of each plant and the planting job is finished.

The holes should be about 6 to 9 inches apart unless you are out for record size when 12 to 18 inch spacing is recommended.

Setting the seedlings this deep does away with the need for blanching the plants before lifting and saves a lot of work as well as the storage of the drain tiles that were used.

As mentioned earlier, the culture of onions is just the opposite. To grow good onions, and ripen them successfully, the bulbs must always be above soil in the sun.

Onion seedlings are set just deep enough to keep the young plants upright. When the roots have taken hold and the bulbs begin to form, the soil is worked away from the bulbs at each cultivation, leaving the bulb sitting on top of the soil like a tennis ball.

Onions started in February and planted out in March or early April, should begin to ripen naturally by mid-July. When this stage is reached the bulbs must never have any more water than is naturally in the soil, for even a heavy rainstorm can spoil the crop.

When natural ripening starts, the outer scale layers of the bulb begin to harden, the neck starts to shrink, and the leaves lose their bright green color and begin to wilt.

If the roots get water at this stage, either from a sprinkler, rainstorm, underground water from a lawn or shrubbery, or nearby vegetables that must be well watered in July, growth starts again at the centre of the bulb. It either ruptures the hardening outer scales to produce bulges on the sides, or — if the outer scales are too hard to break — forces its way into the neck of the bulb resulting in the "bull-necked" onion.

Neither the bulgy nor the bull-necked bulbs are suitable for storage, and useless for exhibiting at fall shows. For this reason alone the placement of onions in relation to other vegetables can be very important.

Both onions and leeks take the 4-10-10 bulb and potato fertilizer, the same as used for the spring flowering bulbs after the wilted blooms have been removed.

With the right seed, the right soil, and the right culture, both the onion and the leek can be successfully grown in our climate.

Work For Week

If warm light and airy place available in house or porch, take short cuttings of new shoots from basket fuchsias and of geraniums to root. If already taken and rooted, put into separate small pots.

Newly bought rhododendrons and camelias in bud should be planted at once in well-worked, drained soil with moistened peatmoss mixed with the soil, not in a layer around the rootball. Water well.

Plant, or replant, horseradish in raised mound of rich soil to prevent roots penetrating and spreading into subsoil.

Rake asparagus bed; dress with light dusting of agricultural salt, mulch with compost or mushroom compost.

If soil workable on south facing slope, sow short row spinach, a few parsley seeds, and a few green onion seeds for early salads. Soil in most gardens still much too wet for seed sowing but be guided by your own findings. Each garden is different.

Take half dozen cuttings of rosemary and lavender to root in can of sandy soil in window. One or two extra plants are good to have.

Prick out seedlings growing indoors or greenhouse; the sooner the better so the young plants will grow into sturdy transplantings.

Around the Galleries

For the English gallery visitor and art collector, narrative painting has always exerted a strong appeal. The satires of William Hogarth and caricatures of Thomas Rowlandson were among the 18th century's most popular art works. Imported interior scenes by Dutch masters also influenced English artists. Thoroughly intelligible paintings impressed Victorians far more than the niceties of aesthetics.

This whole outlook and era is reflected in an exhibition currently at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria. Entitled, The Victorian Milieu: English Narrative Paintings from Canadian Collectors, the exhibition includes many examples of the didactic style of paintings produced at that time which conscientiously depicted moralsof society.

One of the most popular artists was William Powell Frith, whose works on show had to be cordoned off to prevent crowds crushing against them. His The Salon d'Or Homborg, on loan from the National Gallery of Canada is included in this fascinating exhibition. Other artists represented are William Holman Hunt, John Evrett Millais, J.J.Tissot, Lord Frederic Leighton, Myles Birket Foster and George Clausen. The exhibition will continue through May 20.

Opening next Wednesday at the Moss Street gallery, is a showing of 85 watercolors and drawings by Daniel Fowler. The artist came to Canada from England and settled on picturesque Amherst Island near Kingston, Ont. He farmed for 14 years then returned to painting and is recognized now as one of Canada's finest painters of the last half of the 19th century.

This is a major circulating exhibition prepared at the Agnes Etherington Art Centre in Kingston. It is accompanied by a fully illustrated catalogue and includes Fowler's autobiography, published for the first time directly from the original manuscript. The exhibition is arranted by subject matter: his famous still life paintings of dead game represented by six works done between 1869 and 1889 demonstrate his keen powers of observation and relate to his early self-training.

His flower paintings are equally famous for their richness but it is with his landscapes that Fowler made his greatest contribution to 19th century Canadian painting. This showing will continue through April 29.

Printmaker Peggy Arber is currently mounting a dual display of her work under the title, Images in Wood. Now on view and through April 2, is a showing in the foyer of the Phoenix Theatre on the University of Victoria campus. Opening Monday at Emily Carr Centre, 207 Government, a number of her prints will be exhibited until March 30.

Ms. Arber, a resident of Victoria, is partly self-taught but has studied at the Victoria College of Art and at UVic where she continues to work and where printmakers Naoko Matsubara and Pat Martin Bates have expressed special interest in her development.

Exhibiting the work of 10 University of Victoria artists, the Visual Arts Group Show opened recently at the University Centre's Maltwood Gallery. This small show covers a wide range of technique and purpose. The repetitions of tonal balance, depths and perspective relations of color field, and the Don Harvey school of wallpaper design are all represented.

Of particular impact is the collection of Peter Spurrier whose statements express his concern with the effects of light on the soil and on the skin, and with the celebration of youth on the threshold of maturity.

The show continues through Friday.

Mime and Music

Mime and music are closely knit in two performances to be presented Thursday at University of Victoria's Student Union Building. The first takes place at 12:30 p.m. and the second at 2:30 p.m.

The mime artist, who goes by the poetic name of Dolphin in the Sea, is actually Joseph Lennon McCord, who, as a master of the art of Pantozique, synchronizes pantomime and music to invoke experiences of pathos and laughter. Music flows through each piece, enhancing the visual image with auditory color.

Fascinated with the art of mime since childhood, McCord studied with Jean Louis Barrault and has performed with many well-known U.S. musicians and entertainers.

'Theatre Beyond Words'

According to reports, Theatre Beyond Words starts where Marcel Marceau left off. The troupe, widely regarded as one of Canada's most seasoned professional ensembles and on a par with the world's finest mime companies, comes to The Belfry Theatre for three performances, Wednesday through Friday.

Based on mime, Theatre Beyond Words moves far beyond the concept of the white-faced clown picking imaginary flowers. It is a fascinating entertainment for audiences of all ages and walks of life. Rehearsing and performing year round, and producing their own material, Theatre Beyond Words tries to fill the ever increasing demand for the family entertainment they have to offer.

In Australia they were described as an "Internationally supreme company of great mimes." In Paris the French wire service commented on "the diversity and originality ... executed with perfect technique."

All shows are devised by the company and designed for touring. The program consists of vignettes, plays and a situation comedy called Potato People. This is in the style of the North American cartoon featuring carnival masks from Switzerland. Potato People was originally conceived for children, but has an hilarious effect on adults as well.

Leading Theatre Beyond Words' creative process is artistic director Harro Maskow, a 14-year veteran of non-verbal theatre. Starting in his native Germany as a fine arts instructor, Maskow went on to enrol in the famous Ecole Jacques LeCoq in Paris. He came to Canada in 1967, first to teach at the National Theatre School and then to co-found Canadian Mime Theatre at Niagara-on-the-Lake.

Former Victorian With Touring Trio

The coming together of three fine young Toronto artists to form a unique musical trio proved so successful a venture in Ontario that the group, calling itself Cabaretta, decided to venture on a first western tour. Specializing in music of the theatre, Cabaretta comes to McPherson Playhouse Wednesday and Thursday.

A Night in Vienna is the Wednesday offering, in which music by Strauss, Lehar, Kreisler and other melodious men will be performed. This will be followed Tuesday with To Broadway With Love. Here some of the loveliest and most memorable works of Jerome Kern, Gershwin, Rodgers and Hammerstein and Lerner and Loewe comprise the program.

The cast of Cabaretta consists of soprano Annemarie Clark, cellist-pianist Norman Abbott (formerly of Victoria), and violinist Lorna Glover. Norman was well known in Victoria during his student days. A constant winner of festival awards, including the prestigious Congress of Strings Award, he was frequently in demand for concert appearances and chosen several times as a a member of the National Youth Orchestra.

MUSICAL NOTEBOOK

Original music composed by University of Victoria composition students is featured in a concert of contemporary music at UVic Thursday. The 8 p.m. concert is free to the public and takes place in the music building recital hall.

Pieces ranging from large instrumental ensembles to dance performance accompanied by electronic tape are included in the program. Sonic Lab will present the works of music students Anthony Genge, Linda Catlin Smith, Ernest L. Manera and Joan Hollander. The pieces are the culmination of four years work by the student composers and are presented in partial fulfilment for the degree of Bachelor of Music in composition.

Acadian songstress Roseline Blanchard will appear in a concert sponsored by Le Club Canadien Francais de Victoria, Saturday March 24 at 8 p.m. at the Oak Bay Senior Citizens Centre, 1442 Monterey.

She and her accompanying three musicians will perform songs by such well known French-Canadian composers as Calixte Duguay, Daniel Deschenes and Jacques Blanchet.

Within a short period Blanchard has established an impressive reputation, participating in the Granby Music Festival and the Super-Francofete. She also makes regular radio and television appearances on the French language network of the CBC and appears frequently on the highly acclaimed childrens' program, Sesame Street.

Tickets for the performance are available at 853 Caledonia. Reservations can be made by calling 383-5335.

Concerts next week presented by Victoria Conservatory of Music at Craigdarroch Castle, include the recital by sisters Ingrid and Rita Attrot, soprano and piano. This will take place Thursday at 8 p.m. Admission is by donation to the bursary-scholarship fund.

On Friday the Faculty Baroque Ensemble will give its final concert in the early music series, performing works by Vivaldi and Telemann. Admission to this is $2.50 general, $1 for students and senior citizens.

UNDER SIEGE by three determined women, the Commissioner (Morris Holmes) is helpless in this scene from the Aristophanes comedy, Lysistrata. The aggressive ladies are, from left, Wendy Donaldson, Pat Neill and Lori Hallier as Lysistrata. The play will be seen at UVic's Phoenix Theatre, ending the current season there. Directed by Carl Hare, it opens Wednesday, running to March 31. Curtain time is 8 p.m.

Lysistrata Ends Phoenix Season

A flourish of robust comedy richly endowed with classical splendor will conclude the 1978-79 Phoenix Theatre season at the University of Victoria next week. Aristophanes' most famous play, Lysistrata, will bring to the Phoenix stage a company of 48 UVic student actors under the direction of the theatre faculty's Carl Hare.

The run of this deliciously bawdy, tongue-in-cheek play will be 10 nights starting Wednesday and concluding March 31. It should be noted that there will be no performance Sunday March 25.

Lysistrata deals with two great and enduring themes — war between men and the battle of the sexes. The story tells of a resourceful and strong-minded Athenian woman who persuades her sisters of Athens and Sparta to refuse marital favors to their men until peace has been restored between the two states. Although set in Athens of the 5th century B.C., the themes are still fresh today, as the Douglass Parker translation used for this production attests.

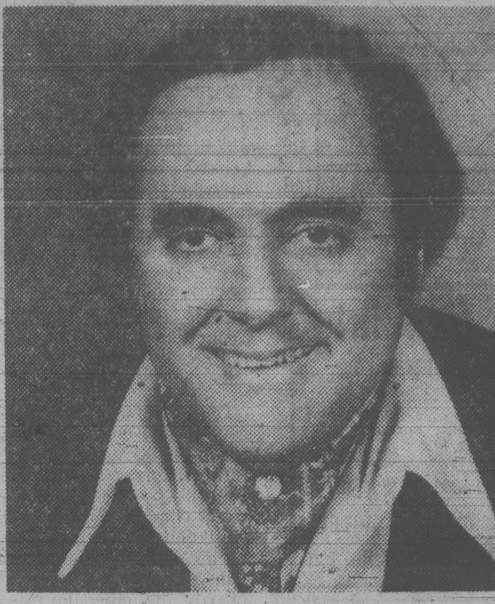
As adapted by director Hare and UVic graduate Michael Boucher, the Phoenix Theatre Athenians may sound suspicioudly like Anglophone Canadians and the Spartans like Francophones, whose conflicts are set out against an exhilerating and hilarious whirl of choruses, battles, songs and dances.

Set design by Bill West, costumes by Deirdre Frederick and lighting by Marcus Campbell provide a visual complement to the entertaining events. Seat reservations can be made by calling the Phoenix, 477-4821.

Lysistrata also concludes UVic's dinner-theatre series for this season. Registration for the evening, which begins with cocktails at 5:30 p.m., dinner at the Faculty Club and proceeds to the Phoenix Theatre, should be made now at the Division of University Extension office in the University Centre. Fee for the inclusive package is $11 per person.

Canadian Guest Conductor

Victoria Symphony Orchestra is approaching the close of its current subscription season with only two more pairs of concerts to be presented in the University Centre Auditorium. For this Sunday's and Monday's event the guest conductor is Gregory Millar, music director and conductor of the Regina Symphony.



MILLAR . . . from Regina symphony

The Canadian-born Millar received his principal musical education in the U.S. and became an assistant conductor of the New York Philharmonic in 1960, serving concurrently as director of orchestral studies at the Manhattan School of Music. Continuing in the mainstream of his conducting career, Millar became music director of the Kalamazoo Symphony and Lansing Symphony, music adviser of the Fort Wayne Philharmonic and Grand Rapids Symphony and resident conductor of the Tucson Symphony. This was all in the decade of the sixties merging into the seventies.

For several years Millar had the distinction of being the only conductor in the U.S. directing two metropolitan orchestras at the same time.

He has made many guest conducting appearances with major U.S. symphonies, and from 1973 to 75 served as artistic director of the National Opera of Mexico.

With the outstanding Canadian pianist Robert Silverman as guest artist, Millar will conduct the Victoria Symphony in the Grieg Concerto in A minor. The program also includes Symphony No.2 in D minor by Sibelius.

Performance times are 2:30 p.m. Sunday and 8 p.m. Monday. Tickets can be obtained at the Victoria Symphony office, 631 Superior, or at the University Centre prior to performance.

The Tasks of a Conductor

audrey johnson

To the initiated it seems a foolish question when someone asks, what exactly does a symphony conductor do? But the question does get asked from time to time, and probably not as often as it should.

It even appears to some that the conductor is not really needed on the podium at concerts. I even read somewhere once that the well-trained orchestra should be able to perform concerts without a conductor.

Theoretically this is probably quite accurate. Many concert-goers must have seen instrumental ensembles from the USSR and Middle Europe rattling off their virtuoso pieces sans conductor. And quite a few European chamber orchestras perform with a leader who is first violin, rather than with a conductor out front. However these are truly virtuoso orchestras.

To put it as simply as possible, what the conductor brings to a musical work is his individual talent in finding ways of expressing the content, of discovering fresh nuances; and some degree of inspiration in addition to technical expertise in communicating his ideas to the ensemble.

Ideally there develops a complete understanding and response between ensemble and conductor by the time public performance is due, a mutuality of confidence and respect. All this leads to the factor that gives the conductor's presence at a concert a special dimension quite apart from his "arm waving," as some people describe it.

This is a kind of communication that does not depend on eye-contact and vocalized ideas; call it telepathic if you like because it certainly flows from the mind of the conductor to a group of people who have been sensitized through rehearsal to receive his thought-patterns. The conductor's presence and personality, therefore, as well as his movements, the signals expressed by eyes and hands, are vital to the quality of most orchestras' performances.

He's an artist at work up there at every concert, concentrating total outputs of mental energy and unbelievable physical energy toward inducing from 65 or 100 musicians the finest performance they are capable of giving.

So much for the conductor in performance. What else does he do?

The answer is that his territory is so comprehensive, so demanding and responsible that one begins to understand why highly competent conductors are not found under every bush, and why the like of Von Karajan or Toscanini or Klemperer occur only once or twice in any generation.

The conductor is also the music director of an orchestra; a term which parallels the role of the artistic director in a ballet or theatre company.

This means he has the onus of selecting all the music to be performed during a season, choosing the guest artists, making every kind of artistic decision based on his accumulated knowledge of the local environment and of the international world of music. He must keep in mind the policies and goals of other related organizations as well as educational aspects of the orchestra's role; in fact he must — an especially complex matter when he is new to the orchestra — strive to establish and maintain good relations with the total community.

All this would be difficult enough if unlimited funds were available. To have to make such multiple and touchy decisions within the framework of tight budget restrictions highlights the music director's job as one for remarkable and varied talents.

FREEMAN
. . . a real pro

Coming new to the Victoria Symphony at this juncture in its history is to encounter more than normal difficulties. The problems that have plagued the society and the orchestra in the last several months have undermined so much of what it formerly possessed in the way of goodwill, confidence and stability. For the musicians it has been a long trauma that is not over yet. There must still be demanded of them patience, sacrifice, dedication — and somehow there must be erased a residual bitterness.

There is a mammoth rebuilding to be done — work that will require strong guidance, mature temperament, more than a touch of genius. Judging solely from an initial — but long — conversation with just-appointed music director-conductor Paul Freeman, the VSO selection committee's choice appears to be one of the most intelligent decisions to have evolved from the society for a long time.

The impression is of a high intellect based on shrewd and practical instincts and a good dollop of altogether essential toughness. Extremely individual in his approach, Freeman is typical only in that he is a thoroughgoing professional artist — secure in experience, focussed and disciplined as to purpose and outlook.

Already, after three days in the city, he had absorbed a quantity of information that made him appear familiar with its character and potential. Throughout our conversation Freeman was reaching for more, coming to tentative conclusions, [illegible] out ideas, mapping several possible courses, making penetrating analyses.

It seemed that such a man could not possibly be unaware of the Victoria Symphony's immediate past and present status. If he is, he is amazingly at ease and confident with the situation — which again seems uncharacteristic of such an alert and pragmatic intellect.

If for any reason he is not at the moment in possession of the total picture and the bed rock of budget restrictions that are going to be essential for the forthcoming season, Paul Freeman's enlightenment won't be long coming.

The interesting question is: how will his genius manoeuvre to overcome the shackling problem? From what I observed this week he is well-equipped to cope on a scale none of the other candidates might have mustered.

So he's not a Canadian. That fact rouses no animosity in me. Nationalism is good only to the point where it becomes unreasonably exclusive.

It's ironic that the very people who complain — as they already have — that the conductor choice should have gone to a Canadian, will seldom be found among those attending performances by Canadian artists.

One would have a much higher regard for Canadian loyalty if young Canadian artists were to be confronted with capacity audiences rather than the scattered handful that too frequently greet our own people.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Sunday, March 18

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on depth, rejection of superficiality, expansion, combining of various points of interest. Gemini, Sagittarius figure prominently — and so does the number 3. You get good news via long-distance call or message.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Lie low, go slow, be meticulous in examining any proposal with complicated legal implications. Aquarius, Scorpio and another Taurus could figure in scenario. Accent on how you relate to those who hold opposing views.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Study Taurus message. Get basic chores out of way early. Ask questions — give full rein to intellectual curiosity. A "lively" colleague or associate could help make this an exciting time. Enlightenment is a keynote.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Young persons could command more-than-usual attention. Key is to accept change, to reject sensationalism, to imprint style without being dogmatic. Objective should be to restore harmony at home. You can do it!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Challenge, test of fortitude — these could be highlighted. Key now is to obtain answers within, to be open to "spiritual revelation." Pisces, Virgo individuals figure prominently. Aspirations and ambitions are due for reexamination.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Good Moon aspect coincides now with trips, close neighbors, inquiries from relatives. Bring responsibilities into perspective. Older individual has rights, but should not make unreasonable demands. Elevate your own self-esteem.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Emphasis on fulfilling long-standing obligation, perceiving future potential, dealing with aggressive individual. Finish what you start. Get views on the record. Check costs. Some persons seek your counsel in connection with money and how it gets that way.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Surprises due — and they are of pleasant variety. New contacts, fresh concepts are highlighted, along with more independence of thought, action. Trust judgment, intuition. Your timing is on target — take initiative. Be direct, confident and wear bright colors!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be merry and bright when visiting one confined to home or hospital. You gain new sense of direction — and security. You can learn through process of sharing, teaching. Aquarius, Cancer, Leo persons figure prominently.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Emphasis on relief from recent emotional pressures. Friendship is "proven." You could have reason to celebrate as wish is fulfilled. Some tend to exaggerate or make promises beyond realm of reality. Be tolerant, accent sense of humor.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Accent on getting point across, winning support, refusing to be depressed by envious, no-talent persons. Stand tall, don't kick toe in sand. Emphasize self-worth. Past view is vindicated. You have right to boast, even if in mild fashion!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your sense of what people need surges to forefront. Accent on publishing, travel, communication, spiritual experiences. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius individuals figure in scenario. You gain through writing, reading, getting views on the record.

IF MARCH 18 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are more "fiery" than most persons might suspect. You draw people to you with their problems — and you are better at aiding others than at helping yourself. You are sensitive, but capable of fighting. You are not afraid to be alone, you can pioneer and have a temper that occasionally gets out of control. Aries, Libra persons play key roles in your life. June could be your most significant month of 1979, a year featuring "digging in," more emotional security, a realistic understanding of money and how it gets that way. Marriage is spotlighted. If already married, there might be an addition to family.

Astrological Forecast for Monday, March 19

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Travel, study, communication and "comparative religion" rate high on agenda. Sagittarius, Aquarius persons figure prominently. Grasp long-range potential. Stear clear of individual who is envious and ill-tempered.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Examine various aspects of investment proposal. One who would be your "partner" could be financially embarrassed. Give full play to intellectual curiosity. Ask questions, especially where "close relationships" are concerned.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Spotlight on agreements, legal clearances. Obtain hint from Taurus message. Defer final judgment — some opinions now are colored by superficial indications, petty annoyances. Take time to be mature — and sure.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You obtain needed answers from "hidden sources." Check with organizations, institutions, hospital employees. One connected with media will be consulting you. Enjoy mystery — don't fear it. You will understand!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Get involved — off the sidelines and into the fray. Imprint, create, make known your views — and be receptive to love. Children, change, variety and speculation could be high on agenda. Stick with number 8.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Obtain hint from Leo message. Your views are sought. You take sides. Courage of convictions wins friends, influences people. Know it; act accordingly. Accent on building for security, enhancing potential, selecting quality material.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Original thinking gets you everywhere. Means lead rather than follow — imprint style, policy. Leo, Aquarius individuals figure prominently. Take special care when lifting — back is vulnerable. Relative calls with "good news."

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Accent on personal possessions, money, material needed to pursue a special project. Follow through on hunch. Flash of insight could overcome red tape. What had been missing will be located. Older, gracious person becomes ally.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Timing, luck, popularity are on your side. Social life accelerates. Travel and personal appearance opportunities increase. Vitality, self-worth make comeback. Gemini and another Sagittarian figure prominently.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You feel secure, but an element of restriction also is present. You can locate "escape hatch" whenever necessary. Know it, be confident — and at peace. Aquarius, Scorpio persons figure in scenario. You get verification — and green light.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Emphasis on special relationship, wishes, fantasies and fulfillment. Gemini, Virgo, Pisces individuals figure in your personal scenario. Now you gain more assurance, prestige, maturity. Yes, you're going places!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Accent on climbing to the top, getting rid of superflous material, defining ambitions, contacting those who can make room for you at top. You make decision concerning home, life style, expenditure related to redecoration, purchase of luxury items or art objects.

IF MARCH 19 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are creative, independent, temperamental, affectionate, passionate, impulsive, stubborn. Leo, Aquarius persons play important roles in your life. An emotional load has been lifted — you will have more joy in your life in 1979, a year featuring travel, accelerated social activity, enlarged horizons, a chance to express and experiment. May could by your most memorable — and powerful — month of the year. You are not popular with those who advocate the status quo. People who lack imagination tend to fear you. Resentment builds in those who doubt their own capabilities. You are attractive to the opposite sex. Your back and feet could be vulnerable areas.

Top School Choirs Another 'First'

The latest of several ways in which the McPherson Playhouse Foundation is pursuing its policy of enhancing community arts programming is the presentation in concert of a number of the top school choirs of Greater Victoria. There will be a pair of concerts at the McPherson Monday and Tuesday at 8 p.m.

Offered as "A Showcase of School Choirs", the event is another "first" for the McPherson Foundation. It is made possible through the assistance of Community Arts Council, Greater Victoria Music Educators Association, the school boards of Greater Victoria and the participating schools. The Foundation hopes that the opportunity of hearing these fine school choirs perform in a professional setting may become an annual event.

Monday evening's performance will present View Royal Community Choir, Monterey elementary choir, Victoria secondary, Cloverdale, Oaklands and Willows elementaries, and Oak Bay Secondary. Seven more choirs will be heard on Tuesday — Pearson College, View Royal, Campus View, Torquay and Burnside elementaries, and Lansdowne and Esquimalt secondaries.

Tickets [illegible] nominally priced at $2 for reserved seats. They are available at the McPherson box-office and Hillside Mall. Proceeds of the concerts will be used to further McPherson Foundation's free community arts programming.

Sri Lanka Tries To Stop Melting Coins into Screws

COLOMBO (AP). — Sri Lanka has amended its monetary regulations in an effort to stop entrepreneurs from melting down the country's coins because their metal content is worth more than their monetary value.

The coins, particularly the five- and 10-cent denominations, are made of a nickel brass alloy that can be used to make screw nails. This resulted in a shortage of small change which made it impossible for bus passengers to have the right change.

The Sri Lanka parliament passed a bill making it a crime to use coins for any purpose other than as money.

Weddings

Dunabeitia — Robertson

The Church of Our Lord in Victoria, B.C., was the scene of a charming afternoon winter wedding on December 16, 1978, when Arleigh, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Robertson of Sidney, B.C., became the bride of Mr. Ramon Dunabeitia, only son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Dunabeitia of Vancouver, B.C. Reverend C. Holmes officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

The radiant bride entered the church on her father's arm to the tune of "The Hawaiian Wedding Song," sung by Mr. Bill Bennett. Given in marriage by her parents, the lovely bride wore an exquisitely designed floor length gown of flowing white silk chiffon, Venetian lace bodice, and three-tiered medieval styled sleeves. The fingertip veil of silk illusion tulle and Venetian lace cascaded from a capulet of seed pearls and flowed into the full train of her gown. She carried a cascade of pink and white cymbidium orchids, white stephanotis, baby's breath and silver eucalyptus. Matron of honour, Gayle Geyssen and maids of honour, Darcia Bains, Sharon Campbell, cousin of the bride, and Niki Dunabeitia, sister of the groom, wore identical off shoulder floor length gowns of Alice Blue and carried colonial bouquets of white crystal mums and baby's breath with blue and silver accents and matching combs for their hair Uncle of the groom, Mr. Don Azpiri, acted as best man and Jan Geyessen, Anjelo Badiola and Kelvin Campbell, cousin of the bride, served as ushers. The groom and his party were handsomely attired in velvet tuxedoes of midnight blue complemented by light blue ruffled shirts and accented by white boutonnieres. The guests witnessed the signing of the register in the church; following which Janice and Brady Conrad sang "Their Special Love Song" to the happy couple. The unique blending of modern and traditional ceremony was brought to a close by the "Lord's Prayer", sung by Mr. Bill Bennett.

A quick windy trip to Craigdarroch Castle for pictures and then on to The Oak Bay Marina where a delightful reception followed. The bride wishes to express warm appreciations to her uncle Mr. Mervyn Campbell of Sidney, B.C., for his most befitting toast to the bride and groom, and also to her cousin, Mrs. Bea Richmond of Sidney, B.C., who acted as Mistress of Ceremonies for the day. Many thanks to all those who helped, and the in and out of town relatives and friends who shared with us making it a memorable day. The bride's waltz was danced to the tune of Elvis Presley's "Love Me Tender", and the bride and her father danced to their special song "Where Are You Going My Little One". The bridal couple left the reception to the tune of "The Last Farewell" and flew off to Australia for their honeymoon.

Wilton — Logan

St. Luke's Church was the scene of a lovely double-ring ceremony on Saturday, December 9th, 1978, when Janice Ann Logan, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Logan, became the bride of Barry Thomas Wilton, younger son of Mr. and Mrs. Hedley Wilton.

The bride entered the church on her father's arm. She looked beautiful, wearing a gown of silk organza over taffeta. Lovely silk Venice lace enhanced the fitted bodice and fashioned the V-neckline. A garland of lace encircled the waistline, trimmed the cuffs of the Bishop style sleeves and the full skirt that swept gracefully entrain. Her fingertip silk illusion veil, with matching lace border, misted from a dainty pleated organza cap, accented with floral lace and pearls. Her bouquet was red roses and baby's breath. Carrying out the Christmas theme, the maid of honour, Susan Logan, sister of the bride, and the brides matrons Denise Woodcock and Deb Felhauer, wore identical red shimmering silk dresses and matching jackets with marabou fur around the neck, and carried white marabou fur muffs with poinsettias and holly. The groom wore a grey tuxedo with charcoal gray lapels. His best man, Steve Sommer and attendants Terry Wilton, groom's brother, Dave Winter, Ken Logan and Ian Logan, brothers of the bride, all wore grey tuxedoes with pin-striped pants. Mother of the bride wore an elegant mint green gown with a matching long sleeved coat. Groom's mother wore a lovely gown of emerald green. Both fathers wore black tuxedoes.

Reception followed at Queen Victoria Inn Penthouse. Mr. Douglas Grant, uncle of the bride, proposed the toast to the bride. Relatives and friends sent telegrams from Scotland, England, Palm Springs and Ontario. Out of town guests included groom's sister, Mrs. Paddie Sarvis, New Jersey, Mr. and Mrs. Terry Wilton and family, Cranbrook, groom's aunt, Bell Flynn, Calgary, bride's friends Deb Felhauer, Prince George and Mr. and Mrs. Barry Warr, Penticton. The happy couple spent their honeymoon at Orcas Island and Hawaii.

Gardener — McLeod

Reverend R. Sansom officiated at a lovely evening double-ring ceremony in St. Andrew's Anglican Church, Sidney, B.C., on November 18, 1978, when Jill Diane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. McLeod of Sidney, B.C., exchanged wedding vows with Capt. John Gardener, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. D. Gardener of White Rock, B.C.

The bride, entering into the flower laden church on the arm of her father, was radiant in her mother's floor length wedding gown of antique ivory satin featuring an embroidered sweetheart neckline, fitted lilypoint sleeves and an embroidered peplum. Her Juliet cap which held a short lace veil, was also satin with the same beautiful embroidery as the dress. She carried a cascading bouquet of red roses, miniature white carnations, baby's breath and ivy. Maid of honour Sher Lynch, and bridesmaids Pat Costa, sister of the bride, and Linda Turnbull of North Vancouver, wore identical gowns in shimmering dusty blue with false cape sleeves. The girls wore daisy combs in their hair and carried bouquets of red carnations, white mums with matching blue streamers. The mother of the bride was attired in a dusty rose full length shirtwaist dress with pleated skirt, and wore a corsage of white gardenias. Mother of the groom chose a dusty rose blouse with a co-ordinating floral evening skirt, and a corsage of white gardenias. The groom, wearing his military mess dress, was attended by Capt. Frank Lindenbach as best man; and ushers were Lt.(N) Roger Westwood, who also were in their military dress, and by his brother Bob Gardener of Surrey, who wore a matching navy blue tuxedo.

Upon leaving, the bride and groom passed under a honour guard of swords and were piped out of the church by bagpiper Peter Aumonier, who also played when the guests were entering the church.

A buffet dinner and dance was held at the Officers' Mess, Naden. Many toasts were given, with the bride's uncle, Carl Norris of Victoria, giving the toast to the bride. The wedding cake, made by Mrs. Irene Wiggans, assisted by Yolie Klooтwyck and designed and decorated by Miss Sheila Marshall of Sidney, was cut with the traditional military sword.

After the reception the young couple went for a short honeymoon to Point No Point, and are now residing in Esquimalt.

Pederson — Rutherford

St. Mary's Church in Oak Bay was the scene of a lovely double ring ceremony on Saturday, March 10, 1979, at 6 p.m., when Laurie Joyce Rutherford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Colin P. Rutherford, was united in marriage with Captain Noel Ned Pederson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Pederson, Dallas, Texas. The Archbishop Hywell Jones officiated.

The bride chose an exquisite gown of fine Quiana matte jersey with fitted bodice and long slim sleeves. Lovely Swiss Guipure lace over net fashioned the yoke which rose to a high neckline, and the same lace design on the sleeve extended to lilypoint cuffs. The floor length skirt swept gracefully entrain, and her fingertip veil of silk illusion tulle misted from a pretty lace Juliet cap, to complete the picture of a radiant and happy bride. Her flowers were green orchids with stephanotis, ivy and heather. She wore an antique pearl and diamond pin of her mother's for "something old". The mother of the bride was gowned in seafoam Jersey fashioned on simple but elegant lines. A jewelled waistline insert was the only trim and a matching coat and yellow orchid corsage completed the ensemble. The groom's mother chose a long sleeved aqua silk gown and pink orchid corsage. Bridesmaids Margaret Oliver and Bunny Tuthill wore matching gowns of soft primrose jersey with matching capelets. They carried silk flower bouquets of white carnations, yellow rosebuds and baby's breath. Mr. Tom Sullivan, Whitby Island, attended the groom as best man; Mr Jim Tarbuck, Michael Berry, Robin Dawes and Bill Ransford were ushers. During the signing of the register Miss Margaret Ransford sang "Evergreen" accompanied by organist Mr. Charles Palmer.

A reception followed at the Royal Victoria Yacht Club where the toast to the bride was proposed by Mr. Philip Holmes and a tape by her god-father Harvey F. Bailey was played. A honeymoon trip to Lake Tahoe followed. The newlyweds shall reside in Long Beach, California.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday. 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

SHAWNIGAN LAKE

2 or 3-bedroom home with 25 ft. of leased beach with private dock. An excellent older building with large living room, porch and patio. A bit of wooded land with trails. Asking $49,500. This is good for starter and retirement.

High class Strata Title development with superior residential qualities. Nice lots of approximately ⅓ acre, about 200 ft. of sunny common beach, safe for small children. Common tennis court and recreational area. Community water hookup. Sewage drain fields installed. Ready to commence building a home from 1,000 sq. ft. upward. Located near the new elementary school. Prices from $18,500 to $25,500. About half the price of a private waterfront lot. This is an opportunity that only comes once.

SHAWNIGAN LAKE

Perfect seclusion on a high spot on the south end of the lake with unequalled view along the length of the lake. About three-quarters of an acre. 154 feet of leased waterfront with private foreshore, older family home with large living and dining rooms, spacious bedrooms and a fine den. Lake view from all these rooms. The basement has been developed into a 2-bedroom apartment for in-laws or for rental purposes. This property was appraised in 1975 for $66,000 for mortgage purposes. It is now for sale for $69,000 due to pressing circumstances. A very good buy indeed.

Guerrilla Wave Feared

MANAGUA (Reuter) — A wave of bomb blasts and shooting rocked parts of the Nicaraguan capital Friday, bringing fears that left wing Sandinist guerrillas might be on the verge of launching a major offensive.

Informed military sources said government patrols came under attack in two suburbs of Managua and that bombs destroyed a communications substation.

Chinese Goods at Bay In Major Trade Deal

By JOHN FRASER
The Globe and Mail

PEKING — The Hudsons Bay Co. claimed Friday a major breakthrough in reciprocal trading ventures with the Peoples Republic of China.

Eight of the company's merchandising experts concluded what one Canadian trade official described as "several million dollars worth of purchases" to be sold in Bay stores throughout Canaa.

The announcement is important to the Canadian government for several reasons. Because of the huge imbalance of trade in Canada's favor, thanks to massive wheat sales, the Chinese have been discreetly putting pressure on Canada to increase its imports.

The one area in which China would most like to push sales is in textiles, but because of heavy protectionist restrictions this also is the one area Canada can do little about, or wants to.

The Hudsons Bay buyers made spot purchases of massive amounts of carpets, luggage, home decorations, toys, stationery supplies, and non-restricted textile apparel and yardage. More important, according to William Coleman, executive director of the Canada-China Trade Council, the purchases "opened the door for the Hudsons Bay Co. to build an increasing volume of business on a broad diversified commodity basis with China.

Coleman said that "in many areas, competition for Chinese export commodities is very keen and supplies are limited."

SOVIET PRODIGY

By International Master
John Peters

The discovery of a new talent always excites chess fans around the world. Gary Kasparov, a 13-year-old candidate-master from Baku, Azerbaijan, astounded Russian chess by qualifying for the under-18 championship of the USSR. What's more, he won the tournament, and represented his country in the World Youth Championship in Holland. He repeated his success the next year in 1977, and gained the title of master.

In 1978, Kasparov won a strong 18-player tournament in Minsk, ahead of two Grandmasters, and a qualifying tournament for the USSR Championship. His 9½-3½ score topped the 64-player all-master field. Kasparov's results surpass those of Karpov and Spassky at roughly similar ages. Normally cautious observers go wild in praise of him. Former World Champion Mikhail Botvinnik exclaimed: "The future of Soviet chess rests on Gary Kasparov's shoulders."

Living up to that may be too difficult, but Kasparov continues to improve. He has defeated Grandmasters Lev Polugevsky and Gennady Kuzmin.

Here's a win by Soviet prodigy Kasparov from a tournament in Minsk, 1978.

FEINSTEIN

WASHINGTON (WP) — In all likelihood there will be no more dramatic moment in Dianne Feinstein's tenure as mayor of San Francisco than the moment when she assumed it.

It was a city still recoiling with horror from the shock of mass suicides and murders in Guyana that November morning when Feinstein stepped before a microphone at city hall to announce that both Mayor George Moscone and City Supervisor Harvey Milk had been shot and killed.

Suddenly, Dianne Feinstein, a widow of eight months and two-time loser in the race for mayor, had assumed leadership of that peculiar amalgam that makes San Francisco one of the world's most uniquely interesting cities.

"The situation was so stark, so unreal, so terrible that everybody was in a great sense of shock," she remembers. "What really had to be done was, one, reassure people, two, put the bricks back together and three, do what's best because sometimes what happens is that volence begets violence."

Riding in a cab through the streets of Washington this week, she was calm and [illegible] and far removed physically and emotionally this spring-like day from the chaos of that autumn one.

"I don't really give myself any great credit. I was able to set a note for people which was helpful, but basically the people of San Francisco are just a tremendously resilient and dignified people when the chips are down," she said.

The calm today is in marked contrast to the personal turmoil she suffered after the death by cancer of her husband a year ago and an uncertain political future. She recently announced plans to be married to San Francisco investment banker Richard Blum, and has become one of the growing pride of female mayors around the country, including those in Phoenix, Wichita, Raleigh, San Jose, Austin and, almost certainly Chicago.

She was in Washington to testify before two congressional subcommittees. She also renewed her friendship with Ambassador Chai Zemin of the People's Republic of China (San Francisco is one of two cities chosen by the PRC for consulates). She took him to dinner her first night in town.

A striking woman at 45, she has even features framed by thick black hair only slightly tinged with straips of gray. She wore an impeccably cut three-piece black wool suit, with a white blouse tied at the neck by what San Francisco fashion writers have dubbed "the Dianne bow." The only color in this otherwise black-and-white study was a gigantic ruby engagement ring set amid two equally impressive diamonds.

In a strong and well-modulated voice she is articulate and eloquent as she tells her congressional listeners she wants to talk "briefly from the heart."

A political moderate, she is still "considering" whether she will run a third time for the office she has won by default. It is common knowledge, however, that she recently added the late Mayor George Moscone's campaign manager to her staff.

"The major consideration," she says, "is the city, and the fact that I came in at a time when circumstances warranted, but without a mandate of the electorate."

There are optimistic signs that the constituency has changed since 1975 when, she thinks, had she been a man with the same last name and experience she would have defeated Moscone. Now she says she can tell from the faces, especially women's, that there's pride in how she is doing.

San Francisco's sizable gay community was reassured as well when she acted swiftly to fill the late Harvey Milk's supervisorial seat with someone else from the gay community.

"It was looked upon as a gay seat," she says. "I felt it was important that violence not interrupt the course of government so I made the decision to appoint someone in the tradition of Harvey Milk."

Secrets of Aging Found?

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Chances of dramatically extending the human life span were raised Friday with the report of a University of Wyoming scientist that she has learned how to extend cell life by one half.

Dr. Joan Smith-Sonneborn, a professor of zoology and physiology, said she uncovered the life-extending mechanism in work with a common, single-celled organism widely used in biology laboratories.

Writing in Science Magazine, she reported that by bathing the cells in different doses of ultraviolet light the damage caused by aging may be delayed, or even reversed.

She described how in her research she had increased damage to the cells by applying a dose of ultraviolet light that hastened the aging process.

That dose was followed by one of so-called black light — ultraviolet radiation of a different wave length — to repair the damage by activating the cell's own repair mechanism, a photoreactive enzyme.

To the surprise of Dr. Smith-Sonneborn and her colleagues, the cells so treated showed a greater lifespan and a more youthful response to further radiation treatment.

Furthermore, by continuing the rounds of ultraviolet treatments, a 50-per-cent increase in cellular longevity was obtained.

The process, in its basic form, is reported to occur natually in simple organisms but in an uncontrolled form that can as easily destroy the organism as repair damage to its DNA (deoxyribonucleic) molecules. DNA enzymes are the building blocs of all life.

Dr. Smith-Sonneborn said she believes that in the laboratory the defence mechanism is set in motion by the first dose of ultraviolet radiation that damages the cell.

When the second, or healing application, is applied, the mechanism is freed to attack the damage caused by the aging process.

Some researchers have suggested that the white corpuscles in human blood contain a similar photoreactive enzyme.

Dr. Smith-Sonneborn told an interviewer her work proves that a defence mechanism also exists in the cells of higher life forms.

"Whether the nature of this defence mechanism is different in humans or not, my hope is that this research will stimulate other studies, leading to extension of the human life span."

She added she believes that once she fully understands the mechanism of the cell repair system, "there may be a way to stimulate cells without the use of ultraviolet light."

Test-Tube Baby Funds

WASHINGTON (WP) — A federal ethics advisory board unanimously recommended Friday that the U.S. government end a long moratorium on funding of any efforts to start human life in the laboratory.

The board voted to tell the secretary of health, education and welfare that basic research and the actual creation of so-called test-tube babies — embryos that start life in a laboratory dish — are ethically acceptable, if the final goal is to produce children for husbands and wives who are otherwise unable to produce them.

Also, the board said, research that merely joins human sperm and ova to create laboratory embryos can be acceptable, even if the new embryo is then destroyed.

This can be permissible, the board said, if the aim is to learn to implant embryos safely in natural mothers, or to gain "important scientific information" about the ways human babies start to develop.

The board did not tell HEW whether or not it should actually fund such research.

Boogie Boy Caught

A boogie-loving 12-year-old Duncan boy has landed in hot water for the second time in as many weeks.

Colwood RCMP picked up the boy at 1:30 a.m. today in a car parked on Goldstream just off the Trans Canada Highway.

Police said the car, a 1962 Lincoln, was stolen from Pro Tire Service in Duncan earlier in the evening along with a small amount of cash.

The boy, who was alone, had $12 in cash.

The same youngster and a 14-year-old boy were stopped two weeks ago on the Malahat in a car stolen in the Duncan area.

This time, as then, the boy told police he was heading for a teen disco in Victoria.

"Apparently he likes to boogie," an officer said.

Severed Tanker In Tow

HALIFAX (CP) — Weather conditions were deteriorating today in an area off the Nova Scotia coast where two sections of the British tanker Kurdistan were being towed out to sea.

Reg Towers, spokesman for the transport ministry, said northwest winds of 30 knots were reported in the area today about 37 miles off the Cape Breton coast where the bow and stern sections are being towed by ocean-going tugs.

The forecast calls for deteriorating weather conditions today.

The Coast Guard has decided to sink the bow section off the continental shelf and a decision on what will be done with the oil laden stern will be made later today.

Meanwhile, an aircraft equipped with scanning equipment was to fly over area today to determine where the estimated 3,000 tons of oil lost from the tanker, has gone. The only evidence of a spill Friday was a sheen of oil spotted off the Cape Breton coast.

Environment Minister Len Marchand arrived here Friday and was to fly over the area today.

Clark Wins $65,000

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Supreme Court ruled Friday that the provincial government must pay $65,000 to former rentalsman Barrie Clark.

Clark, now a radio open-line host, had sued the government for breach of contract.

He was hired as rentalsman by former attorney-general Alex Macdonald in April, 1974, but resigned April 1, 1978, and began the suit.

Clark said Friday he brought the suit because the government did not give him and several senior staff he hired salary raises that had been guaranteed by his contract.

He said he hopes that if the senior staff he hired do not now get the raises, that they will sue the government.

Fisheries Officers Halt Cutting of Trees

Logging like this along Rennel Sound in Charlottes could harm salmon streams

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

Federal fisheries officers in the Queen Charlotte Islands Friday forced loggers to halt falling trees in a controversial restricted area.

The loggers moved out only after the officers threatened to lay charges.

Fisheries official Dave Schutz said that Q.C. Timber Ltd. stopped its operation after the challenge.

"If they go back in there we will definitely lay charges," said Schutz.

News of the incident came only hours after an anonymous caller tipped the Times that Q.C. Timber was planning to cut in the area to force a showdown.

The protected timber is on a 40-acre site put off limits to logging early this year because the steep slope threatens to slide into an adjacent salmon stream, Riley Creek.

Shortly after the federal fisheries department ordered the area left alone, the provincial forests department informed Q.C. Timber that cutting would be allowed.

The confrontation has simmered for over a week, with fisheries threatening to back its stand with court action that could include fines of up to $50,000 or jail terms of up to two years.

The charges would be laid under Bill C38, the Fisheries Act, which makes it unlawful to damage fish habitat.

Schutz said the Friday incident didn't result in the laying of any charges because the fallers had only just started into the restricted timber when fisheries officers arrived.

"They'd crossed over the imaginary line between what we'd said was okay and what was prohibited, but they hadn't taken very many trees."

Schutz said the loggers were aware the timber was off limits and were apparently trying to see if federal fisheries intended to enforce its cutting ban.

"We're going to be keeping a close watch from now on," said Schutz.

A spokesman for Q.C. Timber said from his office in Vancouver that the only members of the company who were authorized to discuss the incident were unavailable until Monday.

It is the first area ever put off limits in the Charlottes because of the steepness of the terrain.

The outcome of the battle will set important precedents which could see logging halted elsewhere in the Islands, particularly in the Moresby Wilderness region which is noted for its rugged and steep terrain.

Sterilization To Halt Pain Of Heredity?

LONDON (AP) — A British couple want to have their three children sterilized because the mother suffers from a hereditary disease that they fear will be passed on to future generations. The decision has touched off a medical and ethical controversy.

Pamela Gooch, 33, has Huntington's chorea, a chronic disorder of the nervous system that causes jerking muscle spasms, slurred speech and premature aging. There is no known treatment and Mrs. Gooch said she has about five years to live.

"I know what a dramatic step this is, but because of their genes, my children have a 50-50 chance of contracting it," Mrs. Gooch told reporters Friday at the family's home in the Staffordshire coal-mining town of Cannock.

"I saw my father die in pain, and my children are seeing me going towards my death in the same way. Only by ending our line can we prevent them from watching their own children suffer."

Mrs. Gooch and her husband said they plan to have Diane, 14, Tina, 11, and Scott, 9, sterilized when they reach the age of 16.

The eldest daughter said: "I would like to have children. But seeing the way mum suffers, I would hate to have kids and pass it on. I understand what mum and dad are doing and I'll go along with it."

The father, Anthony, 40, who works an overnight shift in a coal mine so he can care for his housebound wife and the children during the day, said:

"I know people might criticize us and say we have no right to make such a decision, but I disagree."

But Dr. Brian Stott, the family's physcian, said he is not happy about the parents' intentions. He said he does not believe any surgeon would be happy about performing the sterilization operations unless it could be proved which of the children were going to develop the disease.

The secretary of the Association to Combat Huntington's Chorea, Maureen Jones, said: "Each child has a 50-50 chance of catching the disease. Mrs. Gooch must realize she could be sterilizing one or two of her children for no reason at all. In 20 years there may be a controlling drug even if her children do have the disease."

A spokesman for the British Medical Association said: "We hope no doctor would be prepared to carry out a sterilization. The thing to do is for the healthy parent and the doctor to ensure that the children obtain proper counselling when they grow up."

Rhodes Verdict: Murder

A B.C. Supreme Court jury found Sidney Blair Rhodes, 22, guilty of first-degree murder Friday in the stabbing slaying Oct. 12 of 17-year-old Susan Marie Calve.

The jury deliberated two hours after hearing nine days of evidence from the prosecution and defence.

Mr. Justice D.E. Andrews told Rhodes under the Criminal Code he must serve a minimum of 25 years in prison before being eligible for parole.

Defence counsel Patrick Sweeney said later there will be an appeal.

Calve was found dead in a wood beside Cedar Hill golf course Oct. 14 from 40 stab and slash-type wounds, mostly to the throat.

The jury returned to the court once to ask Andrews for a legal interpretation of first and second degree murder and manslaughter.

Sadat-Arab Rift Grows

Times News Services

Jordan's King Hussein today pledged to oppose the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty and join Palestinian guerrillas in punishing Egypt for its break with the rest of the Arab world, diplomatic sources said.

And Arab militants threatened terrorism and all-out war as a U.S. delegation arrived in Saudi Arabia today to try to win approval for the treaty.

Hussein, up to now considered a moderate, indicated his determination to resist U.S. pressure by inviting Yasser Arafat, leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization, to talks at the northern city of Mafraq and conferring with him a day before the U.S. delegation was to arrive in Jordan.

The U.S. team led by Carter's National Security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, landed today at the Riyadh airport and met with King Khaled and Crown Prince Fahd.

But they were given little chance of convincing the Saudis to join Egypt in mending three decades of war with Israel by approving the peace pact.

Arafat then met with Hussein for four hours at Mafraq, 30 miles north of Amman near the Syrian border.

Jordanian diplomatic sources said the two reaffirmed their support for the Baghdad Arab summit resolutions of last November, which pledged political and economic sanctions against Egypt if it signed a peace treaty with Israel.

Hussein also pledged his support for the PLO as the sole legitimate representative of the Palestinians and both sides voiced their intention to strengthen co-operation between Jordan and the PLO in order to maximize support for the Palestinians in Iraeli-occupied territories, the sources said.

Meanwhile, the Kuwait newspaper Al Siyassah said Palestinian guerrillas want to reactivate a Black September strike force against U.S. targets and Arab moderates supporting the treaty. Black September claimed responsibility for the 1972 Munich Olympics massacre of Israeli athletes.

Four Get Jail For Ignoring Suspensions

Provincial court Judge Blake Allan jailed four motorists Friday for driving while their licences were suspended.

The sentences were handed out the same day a report prepared for the attorney-general's ministry recommended jail terms for the offence.

Judge Allan, commenting that Attorney-General Garde Gardom thinks the same way he does, said he had read about Gardom's approval of a provincial Motor Vehicle Task Force study which recommended mandatory jail terms for suspended motorists caught on the road.

They pleaded guilty to driving while under suspension.

Allan also imposed a 21-day jail sentence on King Tong Lui, also known as Tony King Tong Lui, of 2533 Cook.

Lui was fined $50 for the same offence in January of this year.

Women's Lib Gets Word: Go Home

TEHRAN (Reuter) — An Iranian woman columnist lambasted Kate Millett and other American feminists today, saying "women's lib, Western-style, is irrevelvant, inapplicable, unacceptable and distasteful in our country."

Writing in the English-language newspaper Tehran Journal, columnist Minou Moshiri attacked Ms. Millett and her colleagues, declaring:

"Your so-called liberation has only given you the freedom to be dreadfully alone, to be alcoholic, to be drug addicts, to be promiscuous, to be over-aggressive and finally to be most terribly frustrated and unhappy."

The Iranian government has said it would deport Ms. Millett, 45, following her participation in a number of demonstrations staged here to protest what feminists saw as Islamic encroachments on Iranian women's rights, including attempts to impose the traditional chador (veil and cloak).

"Your bra-burning, your man-hating and your confrontations have led you nowhere in particular, have they?" the columnist wrote. "Your movement, Ms. Millett, is doing more harm than good. It is reaching for the absurd and it is quite frankly becoming increasingly difficult to take it at all seriously without a genuine feeling of embarrassment."

Commenting on a report that U.S. feminist Karen de Crow has formed an international committee to support Iranian women, the columnist said:

"If, heaven forbid, Ms. de Crow is successful in carrying out her threat of uninvited 'help' and unasked-for 'moral support,' she will succeed only in ruining any chance we may have of putting things right our own way.

"With friends like Ms. de Crow, who needs enemies?

"Our women are perfectly capable of taking care of themselves and their problems, thank you. In a matter of a few days, they successfully settled the issue, a rather absurd one I admit, of whether or not to wear a veil.

"So no S.O.S. to the world to come to our rescue please, Ms. de Crow. No moral support, no economic support and above all no delegation of hysterical females to enlighten us, if you please.

"Why do you not continue to emasculate your men, drive your husbands and children nuts and let us fight for our dignity? Yours is a different experience with little relevance and even less application to our own."

Nothing intrigues a journalist quite as much as a voice on the other end of the telephone saying: "The truth hasn't been told yet . . ."

The lady behind the voice was Glenda Osborne of the nearly departed but since reborn Victorian Celebrations Society.

You probably thought the VCS was dissolved and dead after president Helen Beirnes resigned Jan.24 taking nine other executive members with her. Obviously, Ms. Beirnes and friends thought so, too.

"That was their intention as they took with them all the Society's files, office keys and financial records," said Glenda who was left with a mini executive of herself, husband Ossie Osborne and June Beane, and a $12,000 debt. Exit the VCS?

No. Onward the [illegible] pressed, regrouping their forces, amending the constitution to allow for a five-member board instead of 13 and electing new officers with Ms. Beane as president. Right now the Victorian Celebrations Society has 61 paid-up members (it's $2 to join), plans fund-raising drives to pay off the debt, and still wants to be the city's organizer of festivals.

That could be a tricky task since the 10 who walked out have formed a new organization called the Greater Victoria Festivals Society with Ms. Beirnes as president.

When she left the VCS, Ms. Beirnes said the Society's 210 members would be invited to join the new organization. Ms. Osborne said they can't. Not as individuals.

"There is no room for ordinary membership in the Festivals Society," she pointed out. "It's only for corporate memberships — local businesses and things like the Chamber of Commerce. That's all their constitution allows for, apart from a few temporary advisers."

The truth that hasn't been told, said Ms. Osborne is the fact that the decision by the 10 to resign and form a new body was never taken to the membership of the society and, in fact, the members did not want to dissolve the VCS.

"You can't dissolve a society while it owes money," she pointed out. "It's against the law — contrary to the B.C. Societies Act."

At the crux of the squabble is the right to run the annual Victorian Days Parade. With Ossie Osborne then at the helm, the VCS staged what were considered excellent parades in 1977 and '78 but some members (including the Osbornes) who had been to observe festivals from Hawaii to Alaska, wanted new ideas to be injected.

"Others like Ms. Beirnes and Allan Houghton wanted to keep things just the way they'd been for 40 years, however, and when they were elected president and vice-president of the VCS last October, the trouble started," said Ms. Osborne.

"It was so terribly frustrating. All we kept hearing was the phrase 'that won't work here!' But the experienced officials at other major events will tell you that you have to change a festival every three years to keep the interest up. And the secret of a good festival is to have more people participation in events. Otherwise it's just a flat show to watch."

If the Victorian Celebrations Society wants a parade it looks like it will have to start a new one of its own for city hall, the Chamber of Commerce and the Visitors Information Centre have smiled on the Greater Victoria Festivals Society.

The new group has been granted a permit by the city to stage this year's Victorian Days Parade. Unable to get to its files to prepare an outline of its parade program, the VCS missed the Feb.28 deadline to apply for a permit.

"Because of the circumstances, we were allowed to submit a written proposal late and an application for a permit, but we haven't heard back from City Hall yet," Ms. Osborne explained.

The VCS will be content to just sponsor events in this year's parade and may stage its own parade at a different time of the year. It won't try to put on a rival parade during Victorian Days.

Pity. The vision of two opposing parades advancing on each other from different ends of Douglas Street and hopefully demolishing a few of those brass bands as they clash at about The Bay, had started to excite me . . .

Firefighters Angered By Layoff Plan

And if it happens sparks will fly, Terry Erskine, president of the Saanich firefighters' union warned today.

Council's budget committee was told Friday that if the municipality can't get an exemption from the provincial government's five per cent limitation on municipal spending, cutbacks would have to receive serious consideration.

Mayor Mel Couvelier, noting that salaries account for more than 95 per cent of the fire department's budget, indicated a head-on collision with the spending limitation guideline is inevitable.

However, Erskine warned the municipality had better be prepared for a fight [illegible] is taken to reduce staff.

"This isn't a fool-around game," he said. "If we fight, the blast will be blown off the Richter Scale."

Erskine said the level of fire services shouldn't be determined by budget increases but rather by the fire needs of the municipality.

"In Saanich if we look at the ratio of population to manpower we are already undermanned," he said.

Fire Chief Art Fryer has tendered a $2,651,970 budget for the next fiscal year, an increase of 12.4 per cent over the current budget. Firefighters' salaries amount to $1,942,000, an increase of $220,000. In addition administrative staff costs have been pegged at $311,000 and $21,000 set aside for overtime.

Several aldermen were appalled at the thought of cutting back staff.

Ald. Fred Severson, a member of the Victoria fire department, called it a backward step and Ald. John Mika questioned whether the municipality should be bound to the province's spending limitation edict.

"Are we going to agree with a policy that will see us cutting emergency services for our ratepayers?" he asked.

Age of Aquariums Dawns

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

Goldfish, angel fish and red-finned Caribbean gaspers don't mess the carpet, don't bark in the wee, small hours and don't cost a heck of a lot to keep.

That's maybe why more and more people are turning to tropical fish and aquariums as a hobby.

Mind you, if you get into the really exotic breeds, the price can go up, but by and large it's a hobby that needn't cost an arm or a leg unless you get into pirhanas.

For these reasons and others (there's something therapeutic about gazing at a tankful of tiny fish going about their business) buying and raising tropical fish in fresh and salt water aquariums is the fastest growing pet hobby in North America.

So says a lady who should know, Vivienne Beswick, an executive member of the Victorian Aquarium Society.

"The reason is more and more people are living in apartments and find it difficult to try to keep pets like dogs or cats," Beswick says. "So they turn to aquariums."

Beswick, a long-time aquarist, is helping to organize the association's annual show which opens Monday and runs through to March 24 at the Hillside Shopping Centre.

"There will be about 75 entries, including some unusual fish," she said.

"It will be one of the best shows ever held in Victoria."

Talking to Beswick it's easy to see why keeping tropical fish has become such a popular hobby.

There are all kinds of exotic species.

There's the Fire Eel, a black fish with red stripes which may grow 14 inches long or the Ghost Knife fish which has dorsal fins on the bottom instead of on top.

There also seems to be no end to the discovery of new species.

"They are still finding new species in Africa, and South America," Beswick says.

Beswick says most people start with fresh water tropical fish, which usually are on the easiest to look after.

"The salt water fish are more beautiful, but a person should acquire some experience in maintaining an aquarium before getting involved," she said.

The price for fresh water tropical fish ranges from 15 cents to $85 and for the salt water variety, from about $2 to $100.

"But, of course, some rare species are even more expensive and can cost $400 or more," Beswick points out.

"But it's very much a watching hobby. You can watch them for hours. And the fish, of course, get as much pleasure — they watch you."

She said many doctors are starting to place aquariums in reception rooms because of the relaxing effects on their patients.

As in any other hobby, beginners should buy good equipment and invest in a book on keeping fish.

"Don't buy anything cheap and you won't run into trouble."

She also urges newcomers to join the association where they can get advice from experienced aquarists.

Rally All Set

Victoria Ald. Larry Ryan wants the rules for use of the Newcombe Auditorium revised and clarified.

Trade unions will stage a protest rally in the auditorium at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday to protest expansion of essential services legislation.

Auditorium directors at first approved the rally, then vetoed it, saying it wasn't appropriate for the museum.

Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis intervened to allow the meeting to go ahead.

"We appreciated the stand taken by Mr. Curtis," Ryan said today.

But Ryan added that the problem wouldn't have arisen in the first place if the rules were clear.

Present regulations state that all meetings must be in some way related in character to the museum but the rule has been bent for some organizations and not for others.

Grouse Nest Owners Fighting Foreclosure

The owners of the luxurious Grouse Nest estate at East Sooke will make a last ditch effort Monday in the Supreme Court of Canada in Ottawa to stave off a foreclsoure action that has been pending for nearly two years.

Victoria lawyer Rodney Taylor will appear for owners Hasaam and Lenore Kamil in their petition that seeks a hearing on a B.C. Court of Appeals decision.

The Appeals Court, in January, upheld an order absolute issued by the B.C. Supreme Court in Vancouver on June 2, 1978.

The order granted Laurel Properties Ltd. of Vancouver a writ of possession to seize the 560-acre, multimillion dollar property after Grouse Nest Resorts Ltd. defaulted on a $1,350,000 mortgage issued in March 1976.

A lump-sum payment of $1,700,000 was due in March, 1977, but Ken Yule, a Vancouver lawyer representing Laurel Properties said nothing was paid then, nor have any payments been made since.

Yule said the interest payment alone on the mortgage — at 24 per cent per year — works out to $1,100 a day. The debt now exceeds $2.5 million. In addition, Grouse Nest hasn't paid corporate income taxes for 1977 and 1978, he said. The bill totals $59,000 plus interest.

Two deputy sheriffs with moving vans arrived at the Grouse Nest property Tuesday to serve the writ but left an hour later when Taylor managed to get an injunction through County Court Judge Leslie Cashman acting as a local judge of the B.C. Supreme Court.

Yule said the injunction was unusual in as much as it was given ex parte, that is without notice to Laurel Properties or any affadvit material supporting the application.

The injunction orders a stay of execution of the writ for an unspecified time.

Laurel Properties asked the Supreme Court in Vancouver Thursday to set aside the injunction but the matter was adjourned to next Tuesday, the day following the Ottawa court hearing.

Yule said Laurel Properties started its foreclosure action in May, 1977.

Two months later the company obtained an order nisi which gave Grouse Nest six months to come up with the money or forfeit the property.

When the redemption period expired in January, 1978, the Kamils applied for, and got, a three-month extension from the commissioner for corporate income tax. The extension was to allow more time to pay 1976 taxes due.

During that period the Kamils tried unsuccessfully to sell the property and on June 2, 1978 Laurel Properties finally obtained its order absolute to seize the land and buildings.

The Kamils appealed for another extension but it was turned down by the Supreme Court on Sept. 5, 1978. That subsequently lead to the Appeals Court hearing.

Yule said Grouse Nest tried to prevent the order from being registered by filing volumes of papers with the land registry office.

But time, it appears, ran out this week.

Seven Held In Drug Raids

Illegal drugs worth about $20,000 were seized by police in separate Vancouver Island raids Friday.

Seven persons, including a man and woman picked up by Oak Bay police Friday night, are in custody.

The other five were arrested earlier in the day after members of the Victoria and Duncan RCMP drug squads seized four ounces of cocaine with a street value of about $13,000 from a Mill Bay business premises.

An Oak Bay police spokesman said today an officer on patrol stopped a man in the 1800-block Oak Bay Avenue about 8 p.m. and found a quantity of drugs including 20 caps of ground magic mushroom, 65 Tai sticks, and five ounces of marijuana in his car.

About three hours later, officers searched a house at 2080 Milton and seized a kilo of marijuana, 25 more Tai sticks, another loose baggie of marijuana, two caps of an unknown drug as well as a set of scales and a number of small plastic baggies.

A woman was then taken into custody.

Thr man and woman have been charged with possession of marijuana for the purposes of trafficking.

Police said another house was searched but nothing was found.

In the Mill Bay incident the five persons have been charged with possession of cocaine and conspiring to traffic in cocaine.

Charles Carl Maiale, 34, of Duncan, Brian William Harte, 28, of Quesnel, Clark Joseph Perry, 29, of North Vancouver, and Keith Washington, 30, and Patricia Somerville, 26, both of Mill Bay, appeared in Duncan provincial court and were remanded in custody until early next week for plea and bail application.

Blaze Cause Probed

City fire officials are investigating the cause of an early morning blaze that caused $13,000 damage to Harvey's Meat Market, 2709 Quadra.

The fire, reported at 2:34 a.m., broke out by the side of a smoke house at the rear of the building.

It's the Greatest Show On Sea

Colossal, stupendous and tremendous are only some of the words which have been used to describe the show, set against the background of the open Pacific at Long Beach where the roar of the combers along the sandy and rocky coast never ceases.

For from now until mid-April, about 13,000 Gray whales and their young will pass close to the 18-mile shoreline of Pacific Rim National Park between Ucluelet and Tofino.

They will be seen sprouting, rolling, fluking and breaching, within one kilometer of the land.

The mammals, averaging 44-feet in length and weighing about 31-tons each, are migrating to the Arctic from Baja California, Mexico where they winter.

"They arrive in groups, reminding you of a flotilla," said a physician who has watched them year after year.

'They almost seem to know they are being watched and enjoy it."

Park superintendent Frank Camp, said the park staff sighted the first whales in mid-February but the best time to seem them en masse is between now and mid-April.

"At the migration's peak which this year coincides with the Easter weekend, more than 100 whales a day will pass close to the rocky headlands flanking the beach," Camp said.

He said school and university groups are organizing camping trips to the park especially to view the whales.

To assist visitors in locating the best spots for viewing the whales, park naturalists are preparing whale-watching kits, he said.

The annual round trip, covering 20,000 kilometers, begins in the Arctic Ocean each fall and two months later they arrive in the warm shallow lagoons of Baja, California, where the females give birth to calves.

The return migration starts in February and cows with new-born calves are among the last to leave.

Research over the last five years also indicates that a number of them feed in the shallow inshore waters of Pacific Rim National Park, and that some return year after year.

Summer visitors may also see whales from shore but the sight is not nearly as spectacular as the spring migration.

Since the mid-nineteenth century, the species has come close to extinction several times.

In 1850 the Gray whale population was estimated at 15,000 yet by 1885 their numbers were down to several hundred.

Whalers turned their attention to other species, giving the whales a chance to recover, but by the early 1900s, they again became the target of hunters who slaughtered them in their breeding grounds.

Hunting again brought the whales close to extinction by 1937 but that year a ban was imposed as they numbered only 250. Since then they have increased to 13,000.

Yukon Provincial Status After Claims Set: Natives

Settlement of northern Indian land claims must come before the Yukon Territory gains provincial status, a native spokesman said here this week.

Dayle MacDonald of the Council of Yukon Indians said in an interview the Yukon is at a crossroads. The federal government can continue to promote non-renewable resource development and suffer the social-economic ills of a boom-bust economy, or respect the historical rights of the native people by making developers pay the full costs with policies encouraging economic and social independence, she said.

But for success, this understanding must come before provincial status, MacDonald said. Her people have more faith in the territorial council administered by the federal government than they would have in a two-level system of government.

"There are people on the territorial council now with no sympathy or understanding of native problems," she said. A provincial government could bring worse, plus the added burden of dealing with Ottawa.

She noted the Progressive Conservative party indicates it favors granting provincial status if returned to power in the next election.

MacDonald was accompanied by Jim Antoine, a chief of the Dene nation in the Mackenzie River valley, as emissaries of a Northern Native Rights Campaign that opened simultaneously in Victoria, Vancouver and Ottawa.

Position papers were given on aboriginal rights, political self-determination, constitutional amendment, India Act revision, the Alaska gas pipeline, hydro projects, mining, a polar gas pipeline and liquefied natural gas tankers.

Six teams of speakers have begun a cross-Canada tour of major centres to appeal to southern Canadians for support in their struggle for recognition.

A program of public meetings and informal discussions on Vancouver Island began Friday at Camosun College and over the next six days will include Sunday church appearances at St. John the Baptist, Colwood, and St. Stephen and St. Mary, Saanichton; a Monday noon drop-in at the University of Victoria; evening at Salt Spring Island, Chemainus and Courtenay-Comox; Tuesday at First United Church and St. John's Church; Wednesday back at UVic classes and a noon forum at St. John's, open house at St. Michael's and All Angels on West Saanich Road, and evening meeting in Port Alberni.

Antoine will speak Thursday noon to Victoria Rotary Club, and a dinner and discussion for Project North and campaigners will be held at a private location.

"I think we can help a lot in gaining support of southern groups," MacDonald said.

The churches already have some organization directed to northern Indian needs, such as through the World Development Education program, which is sponsoring a dinner for campaigners and special guests at St. John's hall Tuesday night.

Antoine said there are several groups, but all northern natives are in the same boat in respect to claims for recognition and self-development. The Nishgas, for example, have been striving for settlement of their territorial rights for 100 years, but are no further ahead than the Yukon and Dene people who have campaigned only in the last decade, he said.

Bob is a Conservation Officer with the B.C. Government Fish and Wildlife Branch.

He takes the fact that he's responsible for helping to protect the quality of our environment seriously.

He also does it because he knows how important our forest areas are to the people of B.C.

Not just for industry. But for recreation as well.

Bob James is only one of the more than 43,000 members of the B.C. Government Employees' Union working for you all over the Province.

At all kinds of jobs.

Under all kinds of working conditions.

All people whose skill, experience and dedication have made our provincial public employees among the most efficient anywhere in North America today.

And that's something to be proud of.

The B.C. Government Employees' Union

Former Victorian With Touring Trio

The coming together of three fine young Toronto artists to form a unique musical trio proved so successful a venture in Ontario that the group, calling itself Cabaretta, decided to venture on a first western tour. Specializing in music of the theatre, Cabaretta comes to McPherson Playhouse Wednesday and Thursday.

A Night in Vienna is the Wednesday offering, in which music by Strauss, Lehar, Kreisler and other melodious men will be performed. This will be followed Tuesday with To Broadway With Love. Here some of the loveliest and most memorable works of Jerome Kern, Gershwin, Rodgers and Hammerstein and Lerner and Loewe comprise the program.

The cast of Cabaretta consists of soprano Annemarie Clark, cellist-pianist Norman Abbott (formerly of Victoria), and violinist Lorna Glover. Norman was well known in Victoria during his student days. A constant winner of festival awards, including the prestigious Congress of Strings Award, he was frequently in demand for concert appearances and chosen several times as a a member of the National Youth Orchestra.

MUSICAL NOTEBOOK

Original music composed by University of Victoria composition students is featured in a concert of contemporary music at UVic Thursday. The 8 p.m. concert is free to the public and takes place in the music building recital hall.

Pieces ranging from large instrumental ensembles to dance performance accompanied by electronic tape are included in the program. Sonic Lab will present the works of music students Anthony Genge, Linda Catlin Smith, Ernest L. Manera and Joan Hollander. The pieces are the culmination of four years work by the student composers and are presented in partial fulfilment for the degree of Bachelor of Music in composition.

This concert is the final Sonic Lab performance of the 1978-79 season.

Acadian songstress Roseline Blanchard will appear in a concert sponsored by Le Club Canadien Francais de Victoria, Saturday March 24 at 8 p.m. at the Oak Bay Senior Citizens Centre, 1442 Monterey.

She and her accompanying three musicians will perform songs by such well known French-Canadian composers as Calixte Duguay, Daniel Deschenes and Jacques Blanchet.

Within a short period Blanchard has established an impressive reputation, participating in the Granby Music Festival and the Super-Francofete. She also makes regular radio and television appearances on the French language network of the CBC and appears frequently on the highly acclaimed childrens' program, Sesame Street.

Tickets for the performance are available at 853 Caledonia. Reservations can be made by calling 383-5335.

Concerts next week presented by Victoria Conservatory of Music at Craigdarroch Castle, include the recital by sisters Ingrid and Rita Attrot, soprano and piano. This will take place Thursday at 8 p.m. Admission is by donation to the bursary-scholarship fund.

On Friday the Faculty Baroque Ensemble will give its final concert in the early music series, performing works by Vivaldi and Telemann. Admission to this is $2.50 general, $1 for students and senior citizens.
